Voice of church remains critical

Mooketsi Mojalemotho
FRANCISTOWN

The role of the church to usher in sanity, foster harmony and restore hope within any given people and nation remains profound to date. It is against this background that many within the broad spectrum of society are concerned about the deafening silence of the church at a time when the very foundations that have held the nation together for years seem not to hold up. Perhaps, inspired by the Body of Christ's legacy to salvage society from full-scale degeneration, many are itching to hear the Body of Christ's stance to give the kiss of life to the ailing society.

Voice of church remains critical - Ramotshabi

The church should rise like a phoenix from the ashes and restore hope, they maintain.

For many years now, Botswana has been rocked by gender-based violence (GBV) that has disintegrated into a spate of heartless murders, including wanton extermination of the lives of innocent and defenceless children, sending a chill down the spine of the entire populace. Many are left with more questions than answers.

Political leadership and stakeholders alike have, in an attempt to pull society out of this mire, forged ties and enacted more stringent laws as a deterrent, but little has been achieved to date.

President Advocate Duma Boko has recently underscored the urgent need for stronger legal frameworks and more effective enforcement mechanisms to hold perpetrators of GBV accountable. His call for action is a stark reminder of the severity of the matter.

He highlighted that GBV prevalence rates remained alarmingly high, particularly among women and girls.

President of Botswana Unified Fraternals (BUF), a relatively new organisation that oversees existing ministers' fraternals, Bishop Malejane Ramotshabi says the church remains committed to its obligation of nation-building and promotion of good morals in the community.

Bishop Ramotshabi said the church was far from absolving itself of its moral duty, as some people may think.

Bishop Ramotshabi, who also serves as the chairperson of the Francistown Ministers'

Fraternal, underscored that for many years, the church had been a staunch partner and stakeholder in the fight against societal ills.

The Leader of Christ International Fellowship acknowledges, however, that limitations such as finances, as well as a disjointed church of the past, could be the reason the body of Christ had not been visible and more impactful.

He admitted that for a long time, the church had not been well-organised, something he asserted belonged to the past, as the recent development of new structures to govern the church would make it cohesive, formidable and responsive enough to address pressing issues affecting the nation.

"We have been at the centre

of nation building at church and community levels through many programmes whose objective is to build holistic and morally sound members of the society," he said, stating, however, that the lack of finances to roll out some of the community-building initiatives had been an albatross around the neck to make inroads.

Moreover, he noted that the church had also utilised the Ministers' Fraternal platforms to convey wisdom to the government, encouraging it to incorporate its perspective into the overall policy-making process that fostered morally sound communities.

He stated that at some point in the past, the church was at variance with the government concerning specific laws that, although politically correct, had deviated from the decorum of good morals.

He cited as an example, legislation that promoted equality between men and women, one of the many pieces of legislation that some have misconstrued to encourage lawlessness and total disregard for men's headship within the family structure.

"This law, although at face value it looks like a corrective measure and a human rights issue, has rendered asunder the moral campus of the peaceful coexistence of many couples, resulting in dissolution of marriages and, in worst-case scenarios, gruesome killings," he said.

All is not lost, according to the Man of the Cloth, although much work is needed to wage a winning battle against the moral abyss.

The cohesive nature of the contemporary church, he relayed, was well-equipped to grapple with societal ills and maintain sanity within the community.

Plans are afoot for the Botswana Unified Fraternals, a composition of the Botswana Council of Churches (BCC), Evangelical Fellowship Botswana (EVB), and the Organisation of African Churches (OAF), to roll out its programme, which includes engaging the political leadership to find lasting solutions to the nation's problems.

"Our first stop will be at the Minister of Labour and Home Affairs, Major General Pius Mokgware, where we intend to introduce ourselves and share our vision. This would kick into motion a programme of events that we have as BUF," he said, stating that the body of Christ intended to leverage the social media platforms to reach out to the masses.

That being the case, Bishop Ramotshabi said the Francistown Ministers' Fraternal had a cordial working relationship with various organisations and government departments, among them Nyangabgwe Hospital, Jubilee Hospital, schools, the District Administration office, and many others, to provide counselling.

His nugget of wisdom to those aspiring to wed is that there is hope in marriage.

"People need to be taught about the ups and downs of marriage so that they will be able to deal with stumbling blocks that may arise successfully. They need to be drilled and taught that marriage takes a great deal of effort from both parties," he said, regretting the huge statistics of marriage dissolution, which he believed were a result of a lack of guidance.

Ending one's life or killing someone in the name of love, he asserted, was not a solution either. He said couples should normalise ironing out their differences at all times to enjoy peaceful and fruitful relationships. BOPA

Ungazetted settlements deserve basic services

Gaoletshoo Kgatitswe
XHOO

Settlements that are not gazetted should not be denied basic services such as clean water, electricity and roads infrastructure on the basis that they are not officially recognised.

What matters according to Maun West MP, Mr Caterpillar Hikuama, is the survival of those who live in those areas.

Mr Hikuama, who was addressing a kgotla meeting Tuesday in Xhoo settlement, said without services, such places would not develop.

Xhoo, an un-gazetted settlement located just a stone's throw away from Maun and is without some basic amenities which if availed, Mr Hikuama said would allow communities to thrive and contribute to the country's economy development.

Kgosi Kgakgamatsi Masheto of Xhoo said lack of clean water and passable roads was a struggle.

He said residents ended up moving to places where those are available.

Ms Keitumetse Samorwa, a resident of Xhoo, said daily life had become a constant challenge.

"We want to stay and raise our children here but without clean water and electricity, survival becomes a burden," said Ms Keitumetse Samorwa, a resident of Xhoo. For Xhoo and other un-gazetted settlements, development must follow people, because they allow them to explore opportunities and afford them to live a dignified life. BOPA

Medicine supply shows steady improvement

Lesedi Thatayamodimo
GABORONE

The public health sector is gradually recovering from severe medicine shortages that led to the declaration of a state of public health emergency in August 2025 by President Advocate Duma Boko.

The Ministry of Health's Public Relations Officer, Mr Mompoloki Lekoto, said sustained local and international procurement efforts have resulted in frequent deliveries, significantly improving medicine availability across public health facilities, although full stabilisation had not yet been achieved.

Mr Lekoto said current stocks covered a broad range of medicines required for both acute and chronic care.

"These include intravenous fluids, anti-diarrhoeal medicines, antibiotics, anaesthetic agents for surgical theatres, antihypertensives, anti-diabetic medicines, dialysis supplies for kidney disease, as well as cancer and blood disorder treatments and other biological products," he said. He added that laboratory reagents, imaging supplies and diagnostic tests were also being prioritised to ensure comprehensive patient care.

Mr Lekoto noted that while shortages affected most medicine categories in recent months, availability had improved significantly due to donations and emergency procurements.

"Cancer and blood disorder medicines have been secured through large orders expected to last more than 12 months," he said, adding that suture supplies had also been restored following the delivery of six months' stock.

Mr Lekoto said the ministry continued to rely on targeted micro-procurement for products that remained unstable or required special ordering.

Meanwhile, medicine distribution remains nationwide, with all districts and health facilities receiving deliveries twice a month.

He explained that the system allowed for regular replenishment, although special-order products may take longer to reach facilities.

Mr Lekoto said Central Medical Stores continued to manage a wide range of therapeutic products that required constant monitoring and routine restocking to maintain optimal levels. In some cases, he said temporary rationing across districts was implemented while awaiting larger consignments, with procurement focused on life-saving and essential medicines.

He identified financial constraints as the primary driver of the recent shortages, which limited procurement quantities, adding that rising costs of medical products at local and regional levels further compounded the challenge.

Mr Lekoto assured patients that continued improvement in medicine availability was expected over the next one to two months as additional consignments arrived.

He said where specific medicines remained unavailable, healthcare providers were using therapeutically interchangeable alternatives and redistributing surplus stock within the ministry's system.

"Clinicians are providing tailored guidance to patients with chronic conditions, including access to special-order mechanisms when necessary," he said.

Looking ahead, Mr Lekoto said government was pursuing long-term strategies to strengthen medicine supply security.

"These include exploring pooled procurement arrangements at regional and international levels, government-to-government supply agreements, re-engagement with local suppliers and legislative reforms to ensure transparent procurement and prevent price gouging," he said.

He added that plans were also underway to facilitate primary pharmaceutical manufacturing within the country.

Furthermore, Mr Lekoto said the transformation of Central Medical Stores under the Botswana Economic Transformation Programme was expected to enhance capacity, governance and efficiency through digitalisation and end-to-end supply chain visibility.

He said the ministry anticipated adopting advanced technologies, including artificial intelligence, alongside broader reforms such as the rollout of National Health Insurance. Regional collaboration through SADC pooled procurement initiatives and regulatory harmonisation under the ZAZIBONA framework is also expected to improve pricing and availability, particularly given Botswana's relatively small population.

The Ministry of Health has expressed confidence that the comprehensive measures being implemented will result in a sustainable and efficient medicine supply system that delivers value for money and reliable access to essential healthcare for all Batswana. BOPA

Beef union urges stakeholders to remain vigilant

Keith Keti
SEROWE

A Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) outbreak currently spreading in South Africa poses an imminent risk of crossing into Botswana and threatening the local livestock industry.

Speaking in an interview with BOPA on Wednesday, Botswana National Beef Producers Union (BNBPU) spokesperson, Mr Andrew Seeletso said what began as an inland outbreak in South Africa had moved alarmingly close to Botswana's borders, with confirmed cases reported just 40 kilometres away.

He said the progression clearly demonstrated the rapid movement of the disease towards Botswana.

Mr Seeletso further revealed that the BNBPU, a farmer-owned advocacy umbrella body representing beef producers across the country, had been officially notified by the Department of Veterinary Services of a grave and escalating FMD threat to Botswana's livestock sector.

He noted that Botswana's national cattle herd had been steadily declining over the years and currently stood at approximately 1.7 million. He warned that the numbers could drop even further should FMD cross into the country.

President Advocate Duma Boko previously acknowledged the decline during the launch of the 61 000 Constituency Housing Units project in Palapye in 2025, stating that "Botswana's cattle industry was experiencing a decline, prompting calls for immediate and targeted interventions to boost production and stabilise the herd."

Mr Seeletso said historically, Batswana had relied on importing live cattle from South Africa due to that country's early investment in breed improvement.

He said South African farmers developed superior genetics long before Botswana farmers, which led many local farmers to buy cattle from South Africa to improve and expand their herds," he said.

However, he explained that FMD outbreaks in South Africa had prevented such imports for several years, contributing to the continued decline in Botswana's cattle numbers.

In light of the escalating threat, Mr Seeletso urged all stakeholders in the livestock value chain, including producers, processors and traders of cloven-hoofed animals and their products to remain vigilant and informed.

"Farmers should stay alert to all FMD notifications through the mass media and attend kgotla meetings convened by government authorities and other stakeholders in their areas," he said.

He further stressed the importance of full compliance with livestock movement protocols and directives issued by the Department of Veterinary Services. Mr Seeletso also urged farmers, particularly those in border areas, to practise proper animal management by applying authorised animal identification methods and kraaling their livestock as instructed.

He appealed to the public to immediately report any suspicious movement of cloven-hoofed animals or products.

"Notify the nearest authority of any sick animals, suspected illegal livestock movements or activities that contravene established livestock movement protocols," he said. He further encouraged the use of authorised border crossings only, warning that avoiding unauthorised points of entry or exit when travelling would help prevent the disease from entering Botswana.

Mr Seeletso warned that an FMD outbreak within Botswana would have catastrophic consequences.

He said Botswana beef would immediately lose international market access and its premium value, adding that cattle prices would plummet, devastating the economy and the livelihoods of countless Batswana who depended on the livestock sector.

To counter the threat, Mr Seeletso said BNBPU, in partnership with the Ministry of Lands and Agriculture, had launched a nationwide public awareness campaign.

He said the union would convene a virtual meeting with farmers' associations to broaden awareness and coordinate response efforts across all regions.

BNBPU delegates would also visit key areas to engage directly with farmers and communities. In addition, a disease control fund would be established, with contributions from stakeholders and well-wishers to support disease management efforts.

Mr Seeletso said FMD experts would be engaged to formulate prevention strategies and best practices, which would be shared with the Department of Veterinary Services for integration into the national response strategy.

He described the situation as a clarion call for all stakeholders to unite against the possible incursion of FMD into Botswana. BOPA

Lobatse gears for major boost

Calviniah Kgautlhe

LOBATSE

Nestled between a mountain belt about 70 kilometres south of Gaborone lies Botswana's first vibrant urban settlement, established in the 18th century. Once the cradle of the country's economy, Lobatse later experienced decline due to limited economic activity. The town has since been outpaced by other urban centres. This has as a result, prompted government to take a deliberate decision to revitalise the town through the Lobatse Regeneration Plan.

Lobatse District Officer for Development, Ms Malebogo Basima, said government was currently working on promoting Lobatse through infrastructure development by partnering with investors, bolstering the heritage trail, and positioning the town as a meat Special Economic Zone.

She said so far, implementation of the Lobatse Regeneration Plan 2017–2024, a strategy designed to provide urban design and revitalisation solutions had yielded results, albeit at a slow pace.

The lead town economist revealed that notable achievements included the construction of a modern shopping mall at the old bus rank and the development of the Lobatse Leather Park, which was gradually taking shape. She noted that the strategy focused on six key areas, including redesigning urban corridors as well as primary and secondary roads to increase traffic volumes, attract investors and tourists, and support sustainable community development.

"We are looking at creating appropriate transition from the major roads such as the A1 which starts from Ramatlaba to Ramokgwebana and the A2 road. This is where we will like to do the town facelift because A1 just like A2 is an economic road," she said.

Ms Basima further said plans were underway to upgrade the old Central Business District through the development of a commercial node. Other developments, she said included construction of an upmarket mall at the town park, establishment of a five-star hotel with a state-of-the-art conference facility, and development of a truck stop.

She said Lobatse's location along the Trans-Kalahari Corridor made it ideal, given the high volume of truck traffic from neighbouring countries.

"We are trying to position ourselves to offer investors opportunities and partnerships. We are developing recreational sites and conserving historical sites. Land has been set aside for a Special Economic Zone for the meat industry and dairy production, which will help develop value chains and downstream projects such as the leather park, milk processing industries, and other related ventures. We also have upcoming water projects," she said.

She added that activities such as the Lobatse Heritage Walk, celebration of Samora Machel's birthday, the Bandleng Live Soccer Heritage Cup and the drag racing events, had been initiated to revitalise the town.

Ms Basima said development of the Local Economic Development Strategy was underway, with community consultations ongoing.

"We will identify Lobatse's comparative advantages and use them to our benefit," she said.

She identified old and abandoned structures as one of the town's major challenges, particularly in the commercial area, describing them as an eyesore. Some of the properties are privately owned, with owners unknown.

"Government, through the urban development committee, is working on tracing such individuals. Dilapidated buildings owned by government, will be refurbished for use by youth who have benefited from the Youth Development Fund. These buildings can be converted into youth business incubation centres," she said.

To further boost the town, she said the Lobatse Town Council was partnering with the Swedish International Centre for Local Democracy to develop a heritage trail, capitalising on the town's rich history.

"We have not fully exploited our heritage. The trail will package all our historical sites and position our hospitality industry so that tourists have more to see. This can also stimulate downstream activities such as tour guiding, curio shops and other cultural enterprises."

Nxaraga confronts declining school performance

Gaoletshoo Kgatitswe

NXARAGA

A child is shaped not only by teachers but by the society in which they grow up and this truth came sharply into focus at Nxaraga Primary School, the lowest-performing school in the North West region. The school recorded a 12.5 per cent PSLE pass rate in 2025.

The numbers, a steady decline over the past five years, reflect a problem that extends far beyond the classroom.

At a meeting convened by Member of Parliament for Maun West Mr Caterpillar Hikuama, the community gathered to confront the stark reality where many parents and caregivers are not providing the guidance, discipline, and support children need to succeed.

The MP emphasised that children mirrored the behaviour and morals of the adults around them, and poor societal standards directly undermine academic achievement.

Nxaraga primary school head, Mr Kegomoditswe Mooketsi revealed that the downward trend had been persistent, with results slipping from 0 per cent in 2021 to 47 per cent in 2022, 35 per cent in 2023, 25% per cent in 2024, and finally 12.5 per cent in 2025.

He explained that the transfer of higher-performing students to other schools often left behind learners who struggled, further depressing the school's overall performance.

The challenges extend into homes and communities where parents have often been absent from early-stage learning, failing to support children with homework and not doing much to cultivate a structured learning environment.

Leisure activities such as snooker games is said to consume children's time, and lack of parental discipline compounds the problem.

Community members also noted that teachers' engagement with alcohol affected their teaching, es," she said.

Additionally, she said the council was working with the Botswana Investment and Trade Centre (BITC) and the Special Economic Zones Authority (SEZA) to expand the town's investment portfolio, while developing new service standards aimed at attracting investors and improving ease of doing business in Lobatse. BOPA particularly in areas where depots operate round the clock, drawing attention away from classrooms.

MP Hikuama stressed that improving academic performance went beyond simply deploying interventions at the school.

"When parents and caregivers engage actively in their children's lives, instilling respect, good behaviour, and study habits, children are far more likely to thrive," he said.

Nxaraga Primary's decline is a mirror of wider societal issues in Nxaraga. The village has been painted as one where excessive alcohol consumption and disengagement from children's education are common, creating an environment where learners struggle to excel.

Parents, teachers, and community leaders are urged to recognise their collective role in shaping behaviour, setting standards, and creating conditions in which children can succeed.

For Nxaraga, the time to act is now, and building that foundation, MP Hikuama insisted, is the only way to reverse declining results and ensure the village's children can reach their full potential. BOPA

High population strains services

MOLEPOLOLE

Kopong village remains a closed book to the world yet it is one of Botswana's ancient communities and is home to many people.

This was said by Member of Parliament (MP) for Lentswelatau-Lephewe Mr Tshenolo Bogatsu during a kgotla meeting on Wednesday.

Residents expressed a concern regarding congestion at the village's ancient and tiny but busiest clinic as well as at the schools.

They were equally worried about crime incidences such as house break-ins and livestock theft.

Mr Bogatsu said that since becoming the area MP, he had come to realise that Kopong was not known to many yet had existed for many years and was home to

Member of Parliament (MP) for Lentswelatau-Lephewe Mr Tshenolo Bogatsu said in a kgotla meeting that he was aware of the overcrowding of learners at the two primary schools; Letsholo and Molefe as well as Kopong Junior Secondary School. He said learners' numbers in the three schools opposed figures for a normal classroom set-up.

quite a number of people.

To show just how old the village was, Mr Bogatsu made reference to the 1889 Kopong conference, where a meeting was convened between dikgosi and the administrative of the then Bechuanaland, the latter opposed increased British control.

He said it was puzzling that Kopong was not so well known yet it was more like a main outskirt of Gaborone.

"I came to realise that this is one of the reasons why developments are scarce in this village," Mr Bogatsu said.

He said he was aware of the overcrowding of students at the two primary schools; Letsholo and Molefe as well as Kopong Junior Secondary School.

Mr Bogatsu said Letsholo had about 1 000 learners, Molefe more than 1 200 and Kopong junior had around 900 students, the numbers that opposed figures for a normal classroom which was supposed to be 45 learners instead of 50.

Kopong JSS head, Ms Staff Gaborewe said the school used pit latrines which was not good for students' health.

She also talked about shortage of staff houses with only 29 quarters against the more than 80 teachers.

The school head for Letsholo Primary School Ms Didimalang Matleelana said despite shortage of classrooms, they still admitted learners as a way to promote their right to education.

Assistant Superintendent Michael Mosothwane commanding Kopong Police said stock theft rate in their policing area was currently moderate thanks to the formation of clusters around the village.

The MP informed the meeting that a clinic and a primary school, were planned for in the next financial year. BOPA

Excitement as vision for road construction comes to light

Manowe Motsaathebe
MOTLHABANENG

Residents of Motlhabaneng have been assured that government has committed to construct Motlhabaneng road and others in the Bobirwa network as part of uplifting the livelihoods of the people while simultaneously opening the area as a trade corridor.

Ms Josephine Sasebola of Motlhabaneng runs short of superlatives to laud government for the decision to construct a 16km road from Lekkerpoet road to their village.

Ms Sasebola's views represent those of the residents of Motlhabaneng. They are clad in gratitude, joy and disbelief in equal measure. The road, together with others in the Bobirwa road network that have been an eyesore and a headache to the users, will finally be put to bitumen standard and delivered in 20 months.

"Ha ke tsebe nka ntsha ntho mang ka e fa puso ye ya UDC. Wa tseba ntho e o e dihileng ka tsela ye e kholo... ha ke tsebe nka leboga bjwang," painted in rather disbelief and joy Ms Sasebola expressed her loss of words at the decision to construct the road which has for the longest time been a heartache to users.

In a jovial mood toward a presaged end to their suffering, letting her gratitude and happiness spill over to others, Ms Sasebola said the people of Motlhabaneng and by extension Lentswelemoriti, had suffered greatly on the unforgiving gravel road.

"The road turned into a stream that washed away everything on its way and rendered driving on it a sheer challenge," she said.

Ms Sasebola shared some terrible experiences that many people suffered on the road especially during the rains where some vehicles got stuck, forcing occupants to devise ways of survival. Like Ms Sasebola, one Ms Mathodi Sekoba poured praise to the government for finally acceding to their calls for tarring their road.

"I do not know how to thank the UDC government. This road has been nothing short of trouble and death trap," she said, adding that vehicles using the road frequently hardly lasted long.

Although jubilant, Mr Neo Madome withheld his gratitude, for now, calling on Minister for State President, Defence and Security, Mr Moeti Mohwasa to assure that funds for the construction of the road were available and that the road would be delivered in the 20 months as claimed.

"My problem is that we have had past ministers making such pronouncements and turning against them when we least expected," said Mr. Madome.

However, minister Mohwasa committed that government would ensure the construction of the Motlhabaneng road and others in the Bobirwa network.

He said the roads would not only connect Bobirwa to other parts of the country, but also to neighbouring countries of South Africa and Zimbabwe through Plaatjan-Mathathane road as well as Mabolwe-border post road respectively.

Minister Mohwasa said that while awaiting the construction of the road, the department of roads will frequently grade the gravel road to render it user-friendly.

Meanwhile, minister Mohwasa informed residents of Mathathane that upon discovering new information, in addition to the complaints they advanced to his team recently, government had decided to continue with the construction of Mathathane-Plaatjan road as initially planned.

The new information, he said, pointed out that less than P10 million, contrary to the initial P50 million of the P350 million from European Union meant to develop the SPEDU region, would be required to compensate farmers whose ploughing fields would be affected by the road construction. BOPA

Under a 24-hour economy, businesses and some government departments would operate day and night, creating employment, improving productivity and enhancing economic competitiveness.

24-hour economy: Potential game changer

Thamani Shabani
FRANCISTOWN

Ms Oganeditse Kula, a security officer is subjected to dreadful working hours, with limited time to spent with family, attend to social and personal engagements.

Her routine schedule pertain living home early at 5am everyday and only to return late in the evening when other family members are preparing to call it a night.

For Kula, luxury time and shopping outings with family is something that she hardly includes in her schedule as she knocks off when shopping mall are closed.

With the envisaged 24 hour economy, Kula's life is bound to change as the odd hours that were reserved for people like her who found themselves in security organs will be normalised.

The odd and late night working hours will not be reserved for security personnel as it is currently the case.

"I can finally breathe. I will be able to shop at midnight, grab a coffee at 3am, or attend a morning workout class, all without worrying about time," she said. For Ms Kula, the 24-hour economy is not just a concept, it is a promise of a more balanced lifestyle.

"I will have time for family, friends, and me," she said beaming with hope.

Ms Kula's story is just one example of how a 24-hour economy can transform lives. As Botswana considers this bold move, people like her are eager to reap the benefits. The envisaged 24-hour economy is proposed at the time when the country is preparing to celebrate 60 years of Independence, therefore, the move is poised as a significant leap forward.

From humble beginning, Botswana has transformed into a nation with extensive infrastructure including roads network, schools, hospitals, potable water supply and electricity connections.

Therefore, one wonders if the 24 hour economy will be a game change that will add value to the new government's transformation agenda.

The Minister of Environment and Tourism, Mr Wynter Mmolotsi is a strong advocate for this shift, citing its potential to revive the economy and boost growth. "We are moving toward a 24 hour-economy. Cities like Francistown will not sleep, with people buying anything at any time they want," he said.

Mr Mmolotsi believes this shift will transform Botswana's economy and improve citizen's quality of life.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Chinese yuan strengthens against US Dollar

BEIJING - The central parity rate of the Chinese currency renminbi, or the yuan, strengthened 56 pips to 7.0064 against the US dollar Thursday, according to the China Foreign Exchange Trade System. In China's spot foreign exchange market, the yuan is allowed to rise or fall by 2 per cent from the central parity rate each trading day. The central parity rate of the yuan against the US dollar is based on a weighted average of prices offered by market makers before the opening of the interbank market each business day. Xinhua

China remains world largest online retail market

BEIJING - China has remained the world's largest online retail market for a 13th consecutive year, with its digital consumption exceeding ¥23.8 trillion (about US$3.39 trillion), official data shows. The figure was released at a national e-commerce work conference held from Tuesday to Wednesday. The conference said that China's e-commerce sector has achieved solid gains in high-quality development over the past five years, emerging as a new source of momentum to foster new quality productive forces and playing an important role in advancing the country's new development paradigm. Despite rising external uncertainties, China has continued to expand its win-win cooperation, increasing the number of Silk Road e-commerce cooperation partner countries to 36. Xinhua

US imposes 25% additional tariff on import of computing chips

NEW YORK - US President Donald Trump on Wednesday ordered an additional tariff of 25 per cent on the imports of certain advanced computing chips, which became effective yesterday. In a proclamation posted on the website of the White House, Trump said the tariff shall continue in effect, unless such action was "expressly reduced, modified, or terminated." "This tariff is in addition to any other duties, fees, exactions, and charges applicable to such imported semiconductors, unless stated otherwise below," the proclamation reads.

Trump cited national security concerns for the tariff on imports of semiconductors. Certain advanced computing chips and certain derivative products described in the proclamation refer to those whose "importation does not contribute to the buildup of the United States technology supply chain and the strengthening of domestic manufacturing capacity for derivatives of semiconductors." # 24-hour economy: Potential game changer

He explained that a 24 hour economy meant businesses, including government institutions would operate round-the-clock.

Mr Mmolotsi added that the benefits included increased job opportunities with shift work, improved productivity and efficiency and enhanced economic competitiveness.

He said other benefits would include improved time management for citizens, boost to tourism and hospitality and potential for increased foreign investment.

The mayor of Francistown, Mr Gaone Majere also said a 24-hour economy could be a game changer for Botswana with the potential to boosting the economy.

"Extended business hours can attract more investment, create jobs and increase productivity," said Mr Majere.

He also said the other benefit was with regard to increased tourism because with shops and services open longer, tourists could enjoy more flexibility and explore the country without time constraints.

"A 24-hour service at supermarkets, gas stations and health care facilities can make life easier for citizens and visitors alike," said Mr Majere.

He said the ongoing review of Liquor Act, proposing extended opening hours of liquor outlets was seen as a step in the right direction, citing the positive response to the extended operating hours for liquor outlets during the recent festive season.

"People were not struggling to buy liquor," he added, advocating opening of other sectors of the economy.

The Chairperson of the Francistown informal sector, Mr David Mbulawa hailed the decision to introduce a 24-hour economy, saying it would boost growth and create jobs.

Mr Mbulawa compared the 24-hour economy with holidays, when informal traders often saw a surge in businesses.

"During holidays, we make a kill. With the 24-hour economy, traders will be able to operate around the clock, catering to customers arriving on late night buses," he added.

Mr Mbulawa expects the 24-hour economy to create shift-based jobs for Batswana, reducing unemployment and stimulating economic activity.

"It will create a win-win situation for everyone," he said.

A food vendor, Ms Pauline Mabaya said selling food at night or early in the morning could attract more customers, such as workers on late shifts or travellers.

In addition, she explained that the shifts would increase customers, with businesses opening 24 hours, more people would be out and about, looking for food.

She also said other sectors such as the taxi industry would benefit a lot from the shift as demand for public transport service would increase, especially during late nights or early mornings.

"Drivers will earn more with more trips and passengers would appreciate the convenience of having transport available whenever they need it," said Mr Odirile Toteng, a taxi driver operating the Selepa route. BOPA business impact mentorship organisation, who are the domestic organisers of the event in conjunction with Mr Boemo Maseko of Seriz Capital, has urged Batswana youth to attend in order to be mentored on accessing venture capital and developing high impact business projects.

Speaking to BOPA yesterday, Ms Manowe, said aspiring Batswana youth entrepreneurs would be coached by Harding of Impact Junkie, a United States based institution co-founded by Harding empowering individuals to pursue entrepreneurship that had high impact in terms of job and wealth creation, addressing societal challenges and unlocking individual potential.

"The activities will commence next Thursday (January 22) with the arrival of our American guests, followed by a press briefing on Friday. Thereafter, on Saturday, we will host a business breakfast seminar at the Hilton Garden Hotel in the Gaborone central business district, a youth-focused venture capital start up workshop, followed by an Innovation Summit at the University of Botswana for UB students and the youth," said Ms Manowe.

On January 25, a church service will be hosted to focus spiritual well-being and moral ethos into business ethics, before the delegation heads north to the Tuli Block the following day to mentor the youth on practical on site agricultural start ups.

An official reception to be hosted by the American Embassy in Gaborone on January 27 will follow, serving as the grand finale of the tour, as well as the commencement of the American 250 Anniversary of Independence activities being hosted by the diplomatic mission.

"The visit by Impact Junkie is an initiative of Mr Maseko and Seriz Capital, a corporate financial advisory institution geared towards Botswana youth being availed better access to venture capital. As responsible citizens, we collaborate in hosting Mr Harding and Impact Junkie, given their profile," said Ms Manowe.

Mr Harding, a former Harvard University student president during his studies, has worked with the US Federal government to improve citizen services, and launched The Great Pitch initiative which was awarded US $16 million (P216 million) for innovative ideas to improve government digital services.

Through Impact Junkie, he has worked on empowering and mentoring youth and business start ups, in the United States, Uzbekistan, Turkey, Indonesia, the United Arab Emirates (UAE), Guatemala, Belize, as well as some Caribbean islands.

"We believe it is important to go beyond motivational talk, the youth need to see what is practical, that is why we included site visits. Projects have been picked, their fields are in Tuli Block. Seriz Capital is also fervent about breaking down the bottlenecks the youth face in accessing venture capital, because we realise the country urgently needs youth start ups to address unemployment and poverty. We don't believe the government solely should be responsible, civil society actors, the youth, the church, we need to play a role," said Ms Manowe. BOPA

The transport sector is expected to play a key role in the government's envisaged 24-hour economy, aimed at stimulating economic growth. Taxi driver Mr Odirile Toteng, who operates on the Selepa route, said drivers would benefit from increased earnings due to a higher number of trips, while passengers would enjoy the convenience of round-the-clock transport services. ## OPEC forecasts higher global oil demand in 2027

VIENNA - The Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said on Wednesday that the global oil demand for 2027 is estimated to be 107.86 million barrels per day (bpd), higher than the level of 2026.

Compared with 2026, the demand growth in 2027 will be a "healthy" level of about 1.3 million bpd, according to the OPEC monthly oil market report. In breakdown, the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD) is expected to grow by 100 000 bpd year-on-year, while in the non-OECD, oil demand is forecast to grow by about 1.2 million bpd, led by categories of Other Asia, India and China. In 2026, the global oil demand is forecast to reach 106.52 million bpd, the report says. Compared with 2025, the demand growth forecast for 2026 remained at 1.4 million bpd, unchanged from last month's assessment. The majority of the growth came from non-OECD countries.

"This oil demand growth is expected to be supported by strong air travel demand and healthy road mobility, including on-road diesel and trucking, as well as healthy industrial, construction and agricultural activities," the report says. On global economy, the report says that in 2026, global economic growth is forecast at 3.1 per cent, unchanged from the previous assessment.

In 2027, the world is expected to see a faster economic growth of 3.2 per cent. "This positive outlook is underpinned by normalisation in global trade, fiscal support measures, and ongoing adjustments to monetary policies in major economies," says the report. Xinhua

US economic activity improves as tariff-related cost pressures remain

NEW YORK - US economic activity saw improvement from mid-November 2025 to early January compared with previous months, though inflation did not see a material easing as tariff-related cost pressures continued, the Federal Reserve said in its Beige Book released on Wednesday.

"Overall economic activity increased at a slight to modest pace in eight of the twelve Federal Reserve Districts," says the Beige Book in a survey on economic conditions based on information collected from 12 regional reserve banks. Most banks reported slight to modest growth in consumer spending in the latest reporting cycle, largely attributed to the holiday shopping season.

Prices grew at a moderate rate across a large majority of districts, with only two reporting slight price growth, according to the report.

"Cost pressures due to tariffs were a consistent theme across all Districts," it adds.

Several contacts that had initially absorbed tariff-related costs were beginning to pass them on to customers as pre-tariff inventories became depleted or as pressures to preserve margins grew more acute, the report says.

"AI's current impact on employment was limited, with more significant effects anticipated in the coming years rather than immediately."

The Federal Reserve publishes the Beige Book eight times a year, using reports from its regional banks to survey economic conditions across the United States. The report serves as an important reference for federal monetary policy meetings, with the next policy meeting scheduled for January 27-28. Xinhua

Conservation trust invests in agriculture

Portia Keetile
KASANE

With crop production being a paramount economic engine of Chobe West community, the Chobe Enclave Conservation Trust (CECT) has purchased five new tractors to promote crop production.

Holistically, this purchase is aligned to the Botswana Economic Transformation Programme (BETP), which earmarks agriculture as a priority sector for economic transformation.

In an interview, CECT general manager Mr Moses Sinchembe stated that CECT's investment into agriculture was not only for economic growth purposes but was intended to also have a socially impact on the people of the area.

He said historically, the economy of Chobe Enclave was dependent on three main activities being, crop and livestock production and wages from employment.

However, Mr Sinchembe pointed out that due to human-wildlife conflict in Chobe, cattle rearing declined, resulting in the hectarage ploughed gradually lessening over time.

"With the purchase of the new tractors, our people are back in farms ploughing, which means that livelihoods will be sustained and lives of the people of the Chobe Enclave community will improve."

The manager stated that investing in agriculture in an area infested with wildlife was a clear indication that conservation and agriculture can coexist.

He said the five new tractors were an addition to the three old ones which were in Parakarungu, Satau and Kachikau, adding that the five new ones were distributed in the five CECT villages.

Mr Sinchembe remarked that in Parakarungu 69 farmers registered to be ploughed for with only two enrolling in the Lemang Dijo programme.

He said in Satau, 79 people had registered for ploughing with six taking Lemang Dijo while Kachikau registered 45, five of whom would benefit from Lemang Dijo.

Moreover, in Kavimba 43 people would be ploughed for by CECT with six of them taking Lemang Dijo, while in Mabele 41 registered, three of whom enrolled in Lemang Dijo.

In total, he said 277 farmers across Chobe Enclave would be ploughed for this season by CECT with 437 hectares already ploughed. He revealed that most of the people in Chobe Enclave were self-funded as they bought their own seedlings and fertiliser, after which CECT ploughed for them at a subsidised rates.

In addition, Mr Sinchembe pointed out that the trust had five planters, a boom spray, a ripper, five disc harrows, two mould boards, seven trailers which were all in good conditions.

He said as part of CECT long-term investment, they were looking into farm ownership for commercial farming.

This he said, would require stakeholder engagement for the optimal success of the agricultural sector. BOPA

JOB ADVERT: John Mackenzie High School Principal

About Us:

John Mackenzie School is a reputable private school offering both primary and high school in Botswana. We are committed to providing quality education and developing well-rounded individuals. Established in 1899, we are one of the oldest private schools in the country. As we continue in pursuit of excellence and adapt to an ever changing world, we are about to roll out a new strategic plan for the period 2025 – 2030. It is for this reason that we seek an experienced and visionary leader to head our high school as Principal.

Job Summary:

We are looking for a dynamic and results-driven High School Principal to lead our new five-year strategy. The successful candidate will be responsible for the overall management and academic leadership of the high school, ensuring academic excellence, student development, and a positive school culture.

Key Responsibilities:

- Strategic Leadership: Provide visionary leadership aligning the high school's operations with the school's mission and strategic priorities.
- Governance and Compliance: Oversee adherence to statutory, accreditation, and contractual obligations; serve as an ex-officio Board member.
- Financial Sustainability: Strengthen financial stability through prudent budgeting, cost control, and optimal resource use.
- Performance and Facilities Oversight: Evaluate the effectiveness of all operations, including boarding, teachers' accommodation, and general contracts.
- Projects and Infrastructure: Lead delivery of special and capital projects—such as the solar energy initiative, property development, facility upgrades, and future developments.
- Academic Excellence: Ensure high standards of teaching, learning, and assessment across academic and co-curricular programs.
- Staff Management: Lead, mentor, and appraise staff performance to drive accountability and continuous improvement.
- Culture and Well-being: Promote a disciplined, inclusive, and supportive school culture that advances student development and welfare.
- Enrollment and Retention: Increase student retention and admissions through quality delivery, engagement, and reputation management.
- Sports and Arts Development: Elevate performance and participation in sports and the arts as integral components of the school's identity and growth.

Key Performance Indicators (KPIs):

- Academic performance and achievement of students
- Staff performance and development
- Student discipline and well-being
- Parent and community engagement
- School culture and climate
- Financial management and budgeting

Academic Requirements & Experience:

- Qualifications: Bachelor's degree in Education or a related field. A Master's degree in Educational Leadership, Management, or Business Administration will be an added advantage.
- Experience: At least 5 years of experience in a senior leadership role within a high school or similar educational setting.
- Academic Leadership: Proven ability to improve academic results, support quality teaching, and strengthen curriculum delivery.
- Financial Management: Experience in managing budgets, school resources, and ensuring value for money.
- Personal Attributes: A confident, decisive, and results-oriented leader with good communication, teamwork, and problem-solving skills.

What We Offer:

- Competitive Package: Market-related salary with benefits suited to a senior leadership role.
- Leadership Role: Opportunity to guide a respected school through its next stage of growth and renewal.
- Supportive Environment: Collaborative team, engaged Board, and a culture that values professionalism and improvement.
- Development Focus: Access to learning and growth opportunities aligned with the school's evolving priorities.
- Strategic Exposure: Involvement in key initiatives and projects that shape the school's future.

How to Apply:

If you are a motivated and results-driven leader with a passion for education, please submit your application to JMSBoard@proton.me

We look forward to hearing from you! Closing date: 31 January 2026

EDITOR'S NOTE

Why should Botswana be vigilant?

Botswana is on high alert following the outbreak of Foot and Mouth Disease (FMD) in the Waterberg District in the Limpopo Province, South Africa last year December.

On the radar, are districts bordering South Africa; Tsabong, Good Hope, Ramotswa, Tlokwe, Kgatleng and Mahalapye in a bid to contain the risks that could decimate the livestock industry and result in economic loss.

Note that any outbreak of FMD within a 10 kilometre radius from the export abattoir could cause cessation of operations at Botswana Meat Commission.

For generations, cattle farming has always been the backbone of Botswana's economy.

A larger percentage of the country's income is derived from beef production with cattle farming contributing approximately 75 per cent of the agricultural GDP.

An outbreak can therefore, trigger immediate loss of the lucrative European Union (EU) market, which is dependent on the country's disease-free status.

Of importance is the need for the country to maintain its green status and that livestock in these zones are FMD-free without vaccination.

Botswana especially those in the concerned areas need to be vigilant and enforce observance of FMD preventative measures.

The Ministry of Lands and Agriculture in their press release issued recently, cautioned all to report suspected illegal use of, or smuggling of FMD vaccine into the country. This is because of the detrimental effects that could arise.

The country should not find itself at crossroads, as government has in the past dealt with the blow of FMD outbreak.

The exercise of preventing the recurrence comes at a cost because of the radical steps that need to be taken to control, eradicate the disease and prevent further outbreaks.

The impact also hits hard on rural households as majority depend largely on cattle for their livelihood let alone the financial strain it puts on farmers.

Let us all heed the call by the Ministry, to thwart the spillage of Foot and Mouth Disease that might arise due to uncontrolled movement of cloven-hooved animals between Botswana and South Africa.

South Africa unveils decade-long strategy to combat FMD

CAPE TOWN

South Africa has outlined a 10-year national strategy on foot-and-mouth disease (FMD) containment, announcing the launch of a nationwide vaccination campaign and plans to seek a declaration of the outbreak as a national disaster.

Speaking at a press briefing in Cape Town on Tuesday, South Africa's Minister of Agriculture

John Steenhuisen

Germany to send military personnel to Greenland

BERLIN

The German Ministry of Defense on Wednesday announced that it will participate in a multinational reconnaissance mission in Greenland to assess potential military contributions to regional security.

At the invitation of Denmark, a team of 13 personnel from the Bundeswehr, the German armed forces, will join other European nations for the mission in Greenland, according to the ministry.

The team is set to depart for Nuuk, the capital of Greenland, on Thursday morning. The aim of the mission is to explore framework conditions for potential military support to Denmark in ensuring security in the region.

The team will look into capabilities such as maritime surveillance, the ministry said.

The Danish Ministry of Defense confirmed that Denmark was increasing its military presence in and around Greenland, working closely with NATO allies.

On the same day, Swedish Prime Minister Ulf Kristersson said that Sweden had sent military personnel to Greenland at Denmark's request.

Norway has also said that it was sending two military staffers to Greenland to "map out further cooperation between allies."

Greenland is a self-governing territory within the Kingdom of Denmark, with Copenhagen retaining control over defense and foreign policy.

The United States maintains a military base on the island.

Since returning to office in 2025, U.S. President Donald Trump has repeatedly expressed a desire to "obtain" Greenland and has recently ramped up his threat.

Xinhua

John Steenhuisen said government was rolling out a clear and technically grounded roadmap to protect the national livestock herd and restore the country's international agricultural standing after losing its FMD-free status in 2019.

"Our strategy will be phased over 10 years, beginning with stabilisation and consolidation, before moving toward the eventual withdrawal of vaccination and final recognition of national freedom through vaccination by the World Organization for Animal Health," Steenhuisen said.

He said South Africa's FMD outbreak began in 2021 following animal movements from Phalaborwa in Limpopo Province to KwaZulu-Natal Province.

Since then, the disease has spread to multiple regions, with Northern Cape remaining the only one of the country's nine provinces to have never reported an FMD outbreak.

KwaZulu-Natal, Gauteng, Free State, and North West were identified as the hardest-hit, high-risk provinces, Steenhuisen said.

"Interventions include the immediate mass vaccination across affected districts that will be repeated within three months 100 percent vaccination of feedlots and dairy cows; 90 percent of commercial and 80 percent of communal animals," he said, noting that government aimed to reduce outbreak incidence in high-risk provinces by more than 70 per cent within 12 months.

"We will be approaching the national government to declare FMD a state of disaster,"

Steenhuisen said, adding that such declaration would allow greater cooperation from law enforcement and other authorities to support broader efforts to contain the FMD outbreak. Xinhua

Britain warns against non-essential travel to Israel

LONDON

The British government on Wednesday warned against "all but essential travel" to Israel, citing heightened regional tensions that could lead to travel disruption and other unanticipated impacts.

In updated travel guidance issued by the Foreign Office, British authorities also advised against all travel to certain parts of the region, noting that the deteriorating security environment poses increased risks to travelers, and urge caution across much of the region.

The guidance applies to both Israel and the Palestinian territories and remains under continuous review, said the Foreign Office. Xinhua

Egypt will not accept Sudan collapse

CAIRO

Egypt will not accept, under any circumstances, the collapse of Sudan, its national institutions, or the fragmentation of its territory, Egyptian Foreign Minister Badr Abdelatty said on Wednesday.

Abdelatty made the remarks at a joint press conference in Cairo with Ramtane Lamamra, the UN secretary-general's personal envoy for Sudan, on the sidelines of the fifth consultative meeting on enhancing coordination of peace efforts in Sudan.

The Egyptian minister reiterated his country's "red lines" regarding Sudan's unity and territorial integrity, stressing that Egypt would never recognize "any parallel entities or militias in Sudan."

He warned that "Egypt would not stand idle and would not hesitate to take necessary measures to preserve Sudan's unity and territorial integrity," emphasizing that the ongoing conflict poses serious risks to regional peace and security, particularly in neighboring countries and the Horn of Africa and Red Sea regions.

He said ending the bloodshed required urgent humanitarian truce followed by a sustainable ceasefire and the launch of "a comprehensive political process." Chaired by Abdelatty, the meeting was attended by officials and representatives from over a dozen countries as well as regional and international organisations.

Chinese Ambassador to Egypt Liao Liqiang, who also attended the meeting, said that the most urgent task in resolving the Sudanese issue is to promote a ceasefire and that the fundamental solution was to achieve a political settlement.

He said China maintains close communication with all relevant parties and "actively participates in mediation and political settlement efforts on the Sudan issue," adding that Beijing supports relevant peacemaking efforts by the UN and regional countries and organisations.

Liao pointed out that China provided Sudan with multiple batches of humanitarian aid, including food, medical supplies and disaster relief assistance, and cooperated with the UN Food and Agriculture Organization on poverty alleviation and agricultural assistance programs in Sudan.

"Sudan's emergence from the shadow of war and the restoration of peace will benefit not only Sudan but also regional peace and stability," Liao added, stressing China's readiness to work with the international community to help end the fighting, ease the humanitarian crisis, and achieve lasting peace and reconstruction in Sudan. Xinhua

Keledi Marameng serves as eulogy for GBV victims

By Ketshepile More
GABORONE

Jazz sensation Kearoma Rantao has released a stirring single aimed at raising awareness and combating gender-based violence (GBV).

Titled Keledi Marameng, the soulful track, produced by Bangu, is a call to action against the escalating GBV crisis affecting households across Botswana. Rantao, who is widely recognised not only for her vocals but also for her advocacy against GBV, said the song serves both as a eulogy for victims of violence and a desperate appeal for societal change.

In an interview, Rantao said artists often pour their hearts into music that speaks for the voiceless, but such messages are frequently sidelined in favour of more commercially popular content.

Keledi Marameng is a powerful blend of modern soul and a national cry for justice," she said", appealing to radio stations and DJs to give the song airplay.

She said this is not just a song, but a call for change that needs to be heard.

"We are in a national pandemic of GBV, and we cannot afford to let music that addresses it be silenced by the noise of the charts", she said.

With haunting melodies that amplify silenced voices, Keledi Marameng, which translates to Tears on the Cheeks is a raw and heart-wrenching response to the national GBV epidemic.

The song opens with the poignant line, Ngwana o batla letsele, mmagwe o mo lebitleng, setting a sombre and reflective tone.

Rantao said she is not currently focused on releasing a full album, having observed that listeners tend to engage more with individual singles.

Since the release of her 2024 Extended Play (EP), Ina Lebe Kearoma, she has adopted a strategy of releasing music consistently throughout the year to ensure each track receives the attention it deserves.

Keledi Marameng is available on Spotify, Apple Music and YouTube. BOPA

Traditional Chinese Medicine turns into lifestyle add-on

CHENGDU

For generations, traditional Chinese medicine (TCM) arrived with ceremony as dried roots and peels were carefully measured from wooden drawers, taken home and simmered for hours in a slow, bitter ritual that demanded attention whenever the body called for care. Today, it can be ordered iced. On the iconic Chunxi Road, a century-old commercial area for retail businesses in Chengdu, southwest China's Sichuan Province, a cup of coffee is rewriting expectations.

"At first sip, it tastes like coffee, but on the finish, there is a hint of lemon, light and refreshing," said Shazia, a Pakistani student studying in China.

The drink was a dried tangerine peel and hawthorn Americano. It came from Tong Ren Tang, a venerable TCM pharmacy with a heritage spanning over 350 years. For foreign visitors, the encounter can be puzzling.

Why are coffee, bread and new-style tea drinks in China increasingly infused with medicinal ingredients? The answer reflects not a simple revival of traditional remedies, but a broader reordering of health, anxiety and everyday consumption.

Tong Ren Tang's foray into lifestyle retail is emblematic. Founded in 1669, it has been associated with orthodox medicine since the Qing Dynasty (1644-1911) and has, in recent years, extended into lifestyle-oriented formats.

Through a youth-oriented sub-brand, Zhima Health, it now sells coffee, tea drinks, baked goods and bottled "wellness waters," weaving familiar herbal ingredients into consumption settings young consumers already frequent.

The menu sounds more culinary than clinical with offerings such as goji berry latte, monk fruit Americano and cinnamon cappuccino. These are not prescription drugs.

In Chinese tradition, they belong to what is known as the 'medicinal and edible homology' system, where ingredients commonly used in cooking provide mild nourishment, aid digestion, reduce sugar and help balance taste. Store design does much of the work.

Visual cues from traditional pharmacies remain, but the atmosphere is contemporary and tailored for social media.

Medicine no longer arrives through bitterness and patience, but through taste and convenience. The contrast of centuries-old ingredients served in a coffee cup softens psychological resistance.

"It is not what I imagined Chinese medicine would be. It feels more like a new flavor," Shazia said.

Among young Chinese consumers, the appeal is less about therapeutic certainty than about a sense of reassurance.

He Yue, a 34-year-old programmer, said he does not dwell on whether such herbalinfused drinks have measurable effects.

"At least it feels like I am extending my life. Extending life here functions less as a medical claim than as emotional shorthand. Tong Ren Tang has described this cohort as a self-aware young generation that oscillates between unhealthy habits and small acts of self-repair, seeking balance not through discipline, but through everyday, low-effort rituals.

The product, in this sense, is the ritual itself. What began in cafes has spilled outward. Herbal ingredients are first softened into coffee and tea drinks, then folded into baked goods.

The Chengdu Second People's Hospital has, somewhat unexpectedly, become a destination for medicinal bread. On Chinese social media, posts documenting long queues have multiplied.

Hospital staff say about 70 pieces are baked each morning and another 100 to 200 in the afternoon, most of which sell out. Along one hospital corridor, freestanding signs read like menus and prescriptions at the same time.

Names fuse nutrition with suggestion, such as 'Five-Black Grains Vitality Bread, Five-Honey Spleen-Nourishing Bread and Orange Peel and Hawthorn Digestive Bread.' Each cost US$1.7.

The familiar phrase "medicinal and edible homology" also appears on the signs, referring to an official government catalog that specifies which traditional medicinal materials may be used as food ingredients.

First issued in 2002, the list has since been expanded in several rounds and now covers more than 100 approved substances.

The bread is designed to address modern anxieties such as late nights, sedentary work, takeaway-heavy diets, and digestive discomfort. Consumers appear under no illusion. Online, some joke about "hiding Chinese medicine inside bread." Others describe it as the cheapest way to "extend life."

Few press the question of efficacy. The hospital's involvement, it seems, provides reassurance enough.

The same emotional arithmetic underpins the boom in so-called 'life-extending water.'

In Beijing's office districts, herbal tea shops often see their busiest hours in the evening. Orders are placed fluently as "late-night water," "sleep water," or "ginseng water."

The language borrows from internet slang, recasting exhaustion as something to be eased rather than solved through consumption. Herbal and functional drinks have gained traction in Western markets as well.

Turmeric lattes, for instance, and coffees or beverages infused with ingredients such as ginseng or ganoderma lucidum (lingzhi) have become increasingly common in Europe and North America. Xinhua

Mophato prepares for initiation camp

By Thandy Tebogo

KANYE

Registration for GaNgwaketse mophato initiation exercise start in March. The of the exercise is to instill positivity and transform such behaviours into disciplined adulthood through cultural teachings.

Addressing kgotla meeting recently, Kgosi Malope II of Bangwaketse said this year, mophato initiation would include a camping experience aimed at youth aged 1996 to 2000.

Kgosi Malope II emphasised the importance of registering those within this age group to facilitate accurate record-keeping.

He also urged the community to contribute food for the duration of the camp.

"Mophato initiation exercise aims to instill discipline, respect, and responsibility, preparing our youth for adulthood," Kgosi Malope stated.

He added that the training not only strengthens community bonds but also teaches collective problem-solving and reinforces cultural identity.

Additionally, he expressed concern over the increasing incidents of gender-based violence related murder cases in known as 'passion killings' in Kanye.

Kgosi Malope noted that mophato training could transform such behaviours into disciplined adulthood through cultural teachings.

He raised alarm about the escalating cases of inheritance disputes, where surviving relatives often sell properties against the wishes of the deceased's children.

Former Minister of Local Government and Rural Development, Peter Siele, praised the launch of mophato.

He also raised concerns over increasing femicides incidents as a result of violence(GBV)and highlighted those involved were often cohabiting couples.

He called upon Kgosi Malope II to raise the issue at Ntlo Ya Dikgosi and to collaborate with the University of Botswana to investigate the root causes.

Community member Tebogo Babuile also voiced her concerns, noting that women were often the primary victims of these violent acts.

Still at the meeting Kgosi Malope II announced that Dikgafela cultural festival, which aims to strengthen cultural ties and address critical social issues within the community will be held in August 21 with delivery of harvest and September 25 where traditional beer will be displayed at main kgotla. BOPA

China unveils archaeological findings

BEIJING

Cutting-edge technologies and research approaches have empowered Chinese archaeologists to unlock new findings, six of which were unveiled to the public on Wednesday, adding layers to understanding China's millennia-old civilization.

Released by a key laboratory specializing in scientific archaeology and cultural heritage protection under the Chinese Academy of Social Sciences, the findings cover fields including biology, military, handicrafts and agriculture.

Among the discoveries is an animal specimen repository, which houses a collection of over 100,000 items of ancient animal bones and extant animal specimens, including the earliest domestic dogs and pigs ever identified in China.

Following the excavation of a tomb from the Tang Dynasty period (618-907) in western China's Qinghai Province, researchers restored a gilded bronze suit of armor using scientific research and restoration techniques.

They also determined, via radiocarbon-14 dating and other techniques, that a fabric fragment unearthed from the tomb dates back to no later than 750 AD, which confirms China as one of the world's primary birthplaces of the classic textile technique of ikat dyeing.

In the field of agricultural archaeology, researchers identified China's earliest documented red bayberry trees and mapped out the evolutionary trajectory of dryland farming.

Archaeologists have also employed satellite remote sensing, drone aerial photography and 3D reconstruction techniques to examine water conservancy projects dating back some 5,000 years in the Yangtze River Basin, with a specific focus on flood control and irrigation.

These findings shed light on the efforts of ancient ancestors to understand climatic and hydrological patterns, and to regulate and manage water resources rationally in response to climate change. Xinhua

Preparations for World relays gain momentum

Anastacia Sibanda
GABORONE

Preparations for the upcoming World Relays Gaborone 2026 continue to gather momentum as the Botswana National Stadium transforms into a world-class arena poised to host one of the most prestigious events on the global athletics calendar.

Recent developments concerning the stadium's track and event coordination shows Botswana's commitment to delivering a successful and memorable championship.

The event holds significant importance for the nation's sporting ambitions.

In a key milestone reached in November 2025, track-laying works at the stadium were completed. Both the underlayer and the final blue running surface were successfully installed and have passed rigorous drainage testing, confirming compliance with international standards. This achievement positions the stadium as competition-ready, equipped to host elite athletes and high-intensity races under global scrutiny. The final technical phase of the track upgrade is set to commence with the arrival of an internationally accredited expert. Specialised marking of the track is scheduled to begin at the end of January 2026, completing the running surface ahead of final inspections, certification, and athlete familiarisation before the event in May.

Organisational preparations have also entered a critical phase. The Botswana National Stadium Company (BNSC) secretariat has relocated from its offices within the stadium to establish the World Relays Gaborone 2026 Secretariat.

This strategic move enables the dedicated organising team to work directly from the venue, enhancing coordination across logistics, operations, competition management, and stakeholder engagement as the countdown to the games accelerates.

The World Relays Gaborone 2026 is anticipated to attract over 1 000 athletes from across the globe, uniting the world's fastest sprinters and relay specialists.

Among the most awaited storylines is the rivalry between the host nation and the United States, a contest expected to electrify the stadium and captivate fans both locally and internationally.

Hosting the World Relays represents a profound opportunity for Botswana to showcase its organisational capacity, infrastructure development, and growing influence in global athletics. The event positions Botswana firmly on the international sporting map while providing long-term benefits, including knowledge transfer, capacity building, and increased confidence in hosting future major competitions.

From a performance perspective, the home advantage is significant. Competing on familiar ground and in front of passionate supporters offers Botswana's athletes a crucial psychological boost.

The championships also provide a vital platform for local athletes to compete against the world's best, sharpening their competitive edge and elevating performance standards ahead of future continental and global events.

Furthermore, the event is expected to inspire the next generation of athletes, strengthening grassroots development and enhancing the athletics pipeline.

Exposure to world-class competition on home soil is likely to ignite national pride, boost youth participation in sports, and deepen the country's athletics culture.

As preparations progress and key milestones are achieved, confidence is growing that the Botswana National Stadium will be ready to welcome the global athletics community. BOPA

BAA braces for busy 2026 season

By Anastacia Sibanda
GABORONE

Botswana Athletics Association (BAA) is bracing for a hectic 2026 season that will feature, among others, the Botswana Golden Grand Prix and the World Athletics Relays.

The BAA calendar is packed from January to December, with several international competitions lined up.

BAA acting president, Oabona Theetso, said in addition to the marquee events, the association would continue with its series of local meets to give athletes opportunities to qualify for major competitions.

He said after the World Relays, scheduled for May in Gaborone, Team Botswana would also compete at the Regional Youth and Junior Championships to be held in Mauritius.

A week later, athletes are expected to feature at the Africa Senior Championships in Ghana.

World Athletics will host the Ultimate Championship in September in Budapest, Theetso added.

"We have Commonwealth Games, Youth Olympic Games and Diamond League meetings as well as local events again," he said.

all over the competitions. Let us preserve their energy so that they continue to represent the country in the coming years. The buck stops with the athletes and their coaches, but as the BAA board we will advise them accordingly," he said.

He warned that competing in too many events increased the risk of burnout.

Theetso further revealed that BAA intended to send a development team to the Africa Senior Championships in Ghana.

"So, the nation should be patient when we engage our development team in some of the competitions. We need to see athletes like Justice Oraatile competing," he said.

Spanish coach, Miguel Corral Torrieria.

Not only that, they have also brought in South African goalkeeper coach Aubrey Bongani Vilakazi, who has previously worked with a couple of clubs in his home country, among which are Orlando Pirates, Moroka Swallows and AmaZulu.

Mochudi Centre Chiefs have also announced a new fitness, strength and conditioning coach, Shagwa Mogwe.

They have also acquired the services of defender Bobo Sima who joins the club on loan from Kaizer Chiefs; and to increase their chances of converting their scoring chances they have signed Zimbabwean goal poacher Evans Rusike on a one-and-a-half-year contract.

The team's manager, Owe Mmolawa revealed that their aim is to finish the league in the top three, and that they are targeting to secure respectable positions in both the league and the Orange FA Cup.

"For the FA Cup, we took a deliberate action to make it one of our targets. We want to win the FA Cup and be eligible to play at the CAF Champions League," he said.

Mmolawa said their dream is to see the club play more at continental level, hence their roping in of experienced players such as Rusike who have played at a higher level before.

Meanwhile Mochudi Centre Chiefs will play against Extension Gunners at GU Stadium while BDF XI will take on Gaborone United at VTM Arena.

Santa Green will play Black Lions at Palapye Stadium and Sua Flamingos will contend with Matebele FC at Sowa Town Council Stadium.

Township Rollers will travel to Jwaneng to face Jwaneng Galaxy, while Police XI will lock horns with Morupule Wanderers at VTM Arena on Sunday. BOPA

Annual Botswana Racewars set for February 7

Calvinia Kgautlhé
LOBATSE

The annual Botswana Racewars drag racing event will now be held twice a year, in February and August, as part of the Motorsport Southern African Development Community (SADC) region calendar. This year's thrilling race is set for February 7, hosted by Maverick Motorsport Botswana in collaboration with Rhyno's Torque Show.

Event organiser Joseph Khengere announced the change during an interview on Tuesday, explaining that the decision to move the previous December event to February aimed to kick off the racing season among SADC member states.

"This date is favorable because racers will be excited for the first race of the year, unlike when it is held in the middle of the year when other similar events have already taken place in other countries," Khengere stated.

Due to heavy rainfall, the event slated for December 13 last year was postponed.

This delay, however, provided organisers an opportunity to enhance their planning and coordinate with neighbouring countries to officially shift the motorsport event to its new schedule.

Khengere emphasised that the goal was to accommodate all stakeholders, ensuring maximum participation and delivering an exciting showdown for fans.

The upcoming Racewars will feature an impressive lineup of modified cars, including Mercedes AMG, AUDI RS5/3, BMW M5, and Porsche 911, which will compete on a 500-meter racing stretch. The defending champion, BMW Dracular 2.0, is also expected to participate.

So far, 12 drivers from Botswana, 15 from South Africa, five from Lesotho, three from Zimbabwe and one from Namibia have confirmed their participation.

In a move to support local empowerment, organisers have introduced the 'Sejana sa Toropo' award to recognise the fastest drivers from Lobatse during the races, further promoting the development of local motorsport talent.

For fans, tickets purchased for the postponed December event will remain valid for the new date of February 7. Ticket sales are ongoing, with prices set at P120. Khengere encourages supporters to buy tickets to experience the exhilarating drag racing action at Botswana Racewars. BOPA

Bragging rights on the line in Francistown derby

Kelebogile Taolo and

FRANCISTOWN

The line-up of weekend matches promises to give football fans a splendid weekend as the FNB Premiership league resumes after the long break from the Christmas holidays.

Teams have used the break to beef up their squads and technical teams, while players used it to recharge, in preparation for the continued fight to help their respective teams to hit the ultimate target of winning the league honours.

In Francistown, spectators are expecting to see a thrilling Ghetto derby on Saturday as newbies Calendar Stars will be up against the Northern Giant, TAFIC FC at a game billed to be played at Obed Itani Chilume Stadium at 7pm.

The clash promises to be electrifying since the two teams are just a point apart, which will make the contest tighter.

TAFIC FC will be looking forward to get maximum points from Calendar Stars to redeem themselves after the not-so-good form they have been displaying lately.

Currently sitting on position 13 with 10 points from the 14 matches they played, The Matjimenyenga Boys are a point ahead of their opponent and a loss would see Calendar Stars move a step ahead of them.

Though TAFIC FC will likely capitalise on their experience of playing in the elite league, Calendar Stars on the one hand will be looking forward to showing the contenders that they too belong in The City Of All Things Precious, and that they are in the league to compete and not to simply add on to the numbers.

Sitting on position 15, Calendar Stars showed a bit of better play in their last games.

Now above Extension Gunners, they have collected nine points from the 13 matches they played.
