Inside the elite capture of Botswana's health system

Minister of Health, Dr Stephen Modise

Govt acts to decongest Princess Marina

GABORONE

Government has launched an urgent reset of Botswana's public health system, moving to take over Sir Ketumile Masire Teaching Hospital (SKMTH), decongest Princess Marina Hospital and clear long-standing surgical backlogs, as pressure mounts across major referral facilities. Addressing the nation on Thursday, Minister of Health Dr Stephen Modise said the reforms signal a shift from crisis containment to structural recovery, guided by President Duma Gideon Boko and aligned with National Development Plan 12 and the Botswana Economic Transformation Programme. At the centre of the intervention is the rapid conversion of SKMTH from a private facility into a fully public hospital by April 1, 2026. The phased takeover begins immediately and is intended to relieve congestion at Princess Marina Hospital, where limited bed space, theatre capacity and diagnostic constraints have delayed surgeries and increased patient safety risks.

Citizens rise to the occasion to plug gaps

Keonee Majoto

As the country continues to grapple with shortages of medical supplies in public healthcare facilities, some Batswana have rolled up their sleeves to help their countrymen. While their actions may come across as a tiny drop in the vast and endless ocean, they are content that they are able to touch one life at a time; their intervention often preventing a further deterioration of health and in the worst-case scenario, a loss of life.

Motherhood Botswana Organisation, a non-governmental organisation (NGO) registered in 2018 with a mandate to improve the psychological wellbeing and social welfare status of women, has seen the ongoing drugs shortage challenges in the public healthcare system, force it to widen its range of services.

Initially, the NGO focused on offering free counseling services and implementing an anti-Gender-Based Violence (GBV) programme in addition to its social empowerment initiative through which it helps deserving women to start businesses to support their families.

Still in the pursuit to protect the dignity of women, the organisation would also help pregnant less-privileged women with essentials necessary for themselves and their newborns whenever circumstances called for its intervention.

However, since November last year, Motherhood Botswana founder, Ms Lindiwe Nkomo started to note a new phenomenon of women pleading to be assisted

Drug availability stands at 50 per cent in Moshupa District

Marvin Motlhabane
MOSHUPA

Overall drug availability at Moshupa District Pharmacy Warehouse stands at 50 per cent.

This was revealed by Principal Pharmacist at Moshupa District Pharmacy Warehouse, Ms Thato Aliu during Assistant Minister of Local Government and Traditional Affairs, Mr Ignatius Moswaane tour of the facility and Moshupa Clinic Council on Tuesday.

Breaking down the availability by category, she noted that essential medications were accessible at 52 per cent, vital medications at 62 per cent, and non-essential medications at 36 per cent.

In his address, Assistant Minister Moswaane encouraged healthcare workers in Moshupa District to evaluate surplus stock at various facilities, so that if possible, any excess supplies could be redistributed to other areas facing drugs shortages.

He stressed efficient resource management as a practical step toward improving access.

Mr Moswaane further assured staff and the community that government continued to prioritise the health sector.

In addition, Mr Moswaane appealed to the public to avoid

Mr Moswaane appealed to the public to avoid spreading negative or unverified information about drug shortages on social media platforms.

to purchase medicines and other medical commodities.

Despite being alive to months-long reports of drug shortages in public health facilities, Ms Nkomo was at first reluctant to intervene given the sensitivity of issues of health.

Nonetheless, when the requests quickly added up, she knew that a matter of life and death was knocking at Motherhood Botswana's door and that the NGO being a champion of issues of the welfare of women, it would be amiss for it to play deaf to the growing pleas for help.

"The shortage of vital health products has significantly increased the burden on our organisation. And even though we do not have support in the form of sponsors, we cannot sit back and watch another woman suffer," she said.

To discharge this added responsibility, Motherhood Botswana relies on monetary contributions from members of its Facebook page, who spring into action whenever a call for contributions is made, raising the necessary amounts to purchase the required medications.

"The numbers (of those seeking help) are really high. We get on average 15 to 20 requests per day and mostly it's cases of cancer, diabetes, hypertension, and kidney diseases," Ms Nkomo explained, saying the high volume of requests pointed to the gravity of the situation.

Ms Nkomo wished government could put into place several interventions including going into effective partnerships with civil society organisations so that they could help carry the burden of support whenever the nation came face-to-face with any sort of crisis.

As the reality of drug shortages continue to test the nation's resilience, some citizens are trying to come up with ways of mitigating the crisis.

A Facebook user, one Kushatha Melanie Schroeder suggests, 'If it was possible, this is the time for families to consider motshelo wa medication'.

During a fact-finding mission by President Advocate Duma Boko at Nyangabwe Referral Hospital on Friday, it emerged that the hospital is grappling with several challenges.

From drug shortages to old medical equipment, constrained spaces and personnel shortages, the case of Nyangabwe reflects a broader situation that is prevailing across other public health facilities.

And a report published last week by the Office of the Ombudsman paints a picture of a public healthcare system that requires urgent attention.

It acknowledges the above-mentioned problems and shows how their combined effect costs government through referrals and outsourcing of services that could otherwise not be necessary.

The Ombudsman reports that government spends P300 million on referrals and P12 million on private Emergency Medical Services (EMS), annually.

Corruption is also blamed for the breakdown of healthcare service delivery, with one of the findings being that some health personnel sabotage service delivery by tempering with medical equipment in order to force referrals to private hospitals.

The Ombudsman also shone the light on public laboratories' failure to obtain and maintain accreditation.

Only the National Tuberculosis Reference Laboratory, Athlone, Sekgoma Memorial, Bamalete Lutheran and Nyangabwe Referral Hospitals are currently accredited; with the rest of the labs having lost their accreditation due to persistent shortages of reagents and the poor state of their lab equipment.

During President Boko's tour of Nyangabwe Hospital, Hospital Superintendent Dr Ivan Kgetse reported that the facility's laboratory was left with just a month's worth of reagents; a worrying development.

President Boko has nevertheless assured the nation that despite the enormity of the crisis, government would face it courageously, adopting where necessary, drastic and unorthodox measures to address it.

The ultimate target of the aggressive and targeted solutions that will be deployed will be to save the nation and restore its confidence in the public healthcare system. BOPA

Inside the elite capture of Botswana's health system

Tshireletso Motlogelwa
GABORONE

On a Thursday evening, Minister of Health Dr Stephen Modise walked into the Btv studio to address the nation.

He appeared composed, almost Zen-like. This was striking for a man widely known within political circles as The Hurricane: restless, kinetic, always in motion. On this night, however, the storm had slowed. The posture was calm. The language measured. The reassurance deliberate.

But the 30-something-year-old minister is burdened with a crisis that did not begin with him, nor with his administration. It did not even begin with the political moment that brought him to office. It is a crisis decades in the making, shaped under a political order that governed Botswana continuously for 58 years, the era of the Botswana Democratic Party.

This matters, because much of the anger now directed at a new generation of leadership is historically misdirected. The collapse now visible in hospitals and clinics was designed, normalised, and defended long before this minister was born, through policies, procurement choices, and administrative cultures entrenched over successive administrations.

For a long time, Botswana's health system survived on trust.

Trust that the clinic would be there.

Trust that the referral hospital would function.

Trust that illness, though frightening, would not automatically become punishment.

That trust did not disappear suddenly. It was worn down through repeated exposure to institutional harm, one missing drug at a time, one broken machine left unrepaired, one referral that felt less like care and more like abandonment.

What citizens experienced was not a single failure, but a pattern of injury, repeated, predictable, and largely uncorrected.

A Crisis with a Political Lineage

From the late 1990s through to the end of BDP rule, Botswana's health system was shaped under successive presidencies, those of Festus Mogae, Ian Khama and Mokgweetsi Masisi.

These administrations differed in style, rhetoric, and political temperament. What they shared was institutional continuity: the same ruling party, overlapping political elites, entrenched procurement systems, and a bureaucratic culture shaped by long incumbency.

It was during this period that key features of the current crisis hardened:

- Procurement systems that tolerated fragmentation and opacity,
- Maintenance regimes that allowed public infrastructure to decay,
- Referral pathways that quietly redirected patients into private care.
- Policy choices that insulated commercial intermediaries from competition and consequence.

These were not momentary lapses. They were governance choices sustained over time.

What the Record Shows

Over successive years, Botswana's own oversight institutions raised alarms.

The Auditor General repeatedly documented weaknesses in health-sector procurement and contract management, delays, irregularities, poor value for money, and the normalisation of emergency purchasing that bypassed safeguards. Findings reappeared across audit cycles, recommendations acknowledged but not implemented, weaknesses identified but left structurally intact.

The Office of the Ombudsman investigated cases of maladministration in public hospitals, identifying equipment failures, dysfunctional referral systems, and administrative neglect that directly harmed patients.

These reports were produced, tabled, and debated during the BDP's long tenure in government. The evidence was available. The patterns were visible. The corrective action was partial at best.

Individually, these findings read like technical shortcomings. Taken together, they reveal something more serious: a system that absorbed damage without resisting it, because the damage did not threaten those with the power to change it.

From Failure to Capture

It is tempting, convenient even, to explain Botswana's health crisis as incompetence, capacity strain, or fiscal pressure. But such explanations collapse under scrutiny.

Botswana was not uniquely poor during this period. It did not lack trained professionals. It did not lack rules, audits, or warnings. What it lacked was the political will, across administrations, to dismantle a system that increasingly rewarded private gain from public failure.

This is where the language of elite capture becomes unavoidable.

Elite capture describes a condition in which public institutions are bent toward the interests of a narrow, powerful group, even as they continue to operate in the name of the public. It does not require overt illegality. It requires self-seeking behaviour protected by proximity to power.

Under prolonged one-party dominance, that proximity became stable, predictable, and difficult to challenge.

Collaborative Destruction under Long Rule

There was no dramatic dismantling of public healthcare under BDP rule. What occurred was more dangerous: collaborative destruction.

Political elites controlled policy direction and appointments. Commercial actors positioned themselves to profit from shortages, breakdowns, and the steady outsourcing of care. Bureaucratic discretion expanded where enforcement weakened.

Each group benefited differently, but all benefited from the same harm.

When medicine was unavailable, patients suffered.

When equipment remained broken, treatment was delayed.

When referrals became routine, families absorbed the cost.

This harm was not accidental. It was reproduced through tolerance.

The Ecosystem That Endured

By the time BDP rule ended, the health sector had become an ecosystem of extraction.

Public hospitals failed reliably. Private providers expanded predictably. Public money followed patients out of the system.

This did not require conspiracy. It required time, continuity, and greed disciplined by access to power.

Why This Series Matters Now

This article marks the beginning of a six-part investigative series that will examine Botswana's collapsed health system as a product of historical governance, not recent surprise.

Over the coming weeks, the series will trace:

- how political power under long BDP rule converged with commercial interests,
- how procurement became a site of extraction,
- how public hospitals were allowed to decay,
- how professionals and insurers navigated, and benefited from, the harm,
- how key policy decisions protected profiteers,
- and ultimately, who did what, when, and how.

This is not an exercise in partisan score-settling. It is an effort to restore historical accuracy.

The crisis confronting the current minister was not inherited from the election cycle. It was inherited from 58 years of accumulated decisions.

The evidence is not hidden.

The timeline is clear.

The responsibility is structural and traceable.

What has been missing is the courage to say so plainly. BOPA

From early February, Government will relocate key services to SKMTH, including accident and emergency care, radiology, dialysis, audiology and selected surgical services. Pharmacy and laboratory support services will operate from both hospitals from February 2 to ease bottlenecks. More than 20 specialist outpatient clinics — including cardiology, nephrology, neurology, infectious diseases and paediatric subspecialties — will also be transferred in the first phase.

Government is prioritising the clearance of surgical backlogs, starting with orthopaedics. At Princess Marina Hospital, 70 orthopaedic patients are awaiting surgery, including 54 fracture cases. The ministry expects to clear the backlog between February 2 and February 20 by using theatres and specialist staff at both PMH and SKMTH.

Orthopaedic bed capacity will increase from 66 to 106, enabling up to 10 operations per day, double current output. Similar measures will be applied to other pressured specialties, including gynaecology, where about 800 patients are awaiting surgery.

To stabilise diagnostics, Government will temporarily outsource laboratory tests that public hospitals cannot perform due to obsolete or malfunctioning equipment, while long-term solutions under NDP12 and BETP are pursued. Three mobile X-ray machines have been deployed to Bobonong, Pandamatenga and Gumare.

On medicines, Dr Modise said Botswana has secured more than 338 essential drugs from the United Arab Emirates, with deliveries beginning February 6 and expected to last up to 7.5 months. Additional supplies are arriving from Zambia, while HIV, TB and cancer medicines are secured for at least 12 months.

Acknowledging public concern, Dr Modise said Government's response is now time-bound and action-driven.

"We are on top of these issues," he said. On medicines, Government said it has secured 338 essential medicines from the United Arab Emirates, with deliveries starting on February 6, 2026, alongside additional supplies from Zambia. Officials also confirmed that 12 months' worth of antiretroviral drugs have been secured.

Government said medicine stocks are now expected to remain stable well into 2026. BOPA

Debate on ConCourt evokes mixed reactions

The proposed establishment of a Constitutional Court through Constitutional Amendment Bill of 2025, has been a topic of significant debate, revolving around issues of legal framework, judicial independence and constitutionalism as well as prioritisation of needs. Proponents of the Constitutional Court argue that it will enhance legal certainty and accountability by providing a specialised forum for constitutional disputes. They also believe it will contribute to the development of constitutional law in Botswana, while opponents express concerns about the piecemeal amendments instead of the holistic approach into the review of the country's constitution. This week government consultations with various stakeholders, district councils and MPs kgotla meetings has revealed that the establishment of a Constitutional Court remains a complex topic.

In Lobatse Calviniah Kgauthe reports that Lobatse councillors have unanimous expressed support for the establishment of a Constitutional Court, with a call for its location to be set in Lobatse.

They made the resolution during a special full council meeting addressed by the Minister of Justice and Correctional Services, Mr Nelson Ramaotwana, on Tuesday.

During their submissions, nominated councillor, Mr Kago Malele emphasised the importance of ConCourt in strengthening Botswana's legal framework and democratic ideals. He stated that as the country moved toward electoral reforms, the establishment of the Constitutional Court was crucial for safeguarding the constitutional rights of its citizens.

Councillor Malele further argued that financial considerations related to the Constitutional Court's budget should not hinder its establishment. He proposed that Lobatse, previously home to the Court of Appeal, was an ideal location for this new court, suggesting that it could revitalise economy in Lobatse, a sentiment echoed by his fellow councillors.

Kgaboesele Ward Councillor, Ms Mathara Moreeng highlighted the historical significance of Lobatse, noting that it was where Botswana's Constitution was first read. She asserted that setting the Constitutional Court in Lobatse would stimulate much-needed development in a town that had lagged behind in progress.

The endorsement for the court's establishment was supported by Thema/Motswedi Ward Councillor Mr Velem Heii, who said government was committed to human rights and the protection of minority groups. He noted that a specialised court would enhance accountability and help combat corruption at all levels of government.

Councillor Gofaone Kedise underscored the urgency of the ConCourt, saying it was long-overdue and was one of the Umbrella for Democratic Change (UDC) pledges in the manifesto. He recounted past instances where the High Court failed to address constitutional appeals, highlighting the necessity for its necessity to ensure justice for the populace.

Supporting the call, Tsopeng North Councillor Gobuamang Motlogelwa reiterated Lobatse's historical significance in the drafting of the Constitution, insisting that the legacy must endure with the establishment of the Constitutional Court.

Minister Ramaotwana addressed councillors about the current limitations within the judicial system, noting that constitutional cases are presently handled by the High Court and the Court of Appeal, which lacked the specialised capacity needed.

He reaffirmed the ruling party's commitment to establishing a dedicated Constitutional Court to protect fundamental rights.

Monday addressed by the Assistant Minister of Justice and Correctional Services, Mr Augustine Nyatanga.

While councillors acknowledged the relevance and the value of a Constitutional Court to the country's judicial system, some councillors questioned the urgency of the Bill, as compared to other challenges the nation was currently facing.

They argued that the process should be deferred and priority be given to issues, particularly considering the current fiscal challenges. "The Constitutional Court is not an urgent matter, the government should focus on improving the health sector and investing in infrastructure development because that is what people currently need. Youth unemployment is very high and young people are expecting the government to create job opportunities for them, not the Constitutional Court," said councillor Keberekile Pule of Mabutsane/Kanaku ward. Mr Pule further noted that establishing the Constitutional Court would come with cost implications which would dent the already ailing economy. Councillor for Sekoma, Mr Kekaetswe Mosarwa underscored the need for the government to focus on issues that needed urgent attention, such as availing medicines at health facilities across the country.

He said the Constitutional Court could be deferred to a later date when essential services such as the health sector had stabilised. Mr Mosarwa also emphasised the importance of exercising transparency when appointing judicial officers for the proposed Constitutional Court. Specially nominated councillor, Ms Gorata Phakedi said introducing the Constitutional Court would align with the government's stance of being human rights based. She said in addition to speeding up the judicial process, the court would contribute towards enhancing democracy.

"The Constitutional Court is very important because it will have independent judges as a way of enhancing democracy. The current judicial system is not sufficient to protect fundamental rights," she said. For his part, the deputy council chairperson, Mr Obakeng Melome said the time had come for people's rights to be protected through the Constitutional Court. He said improving lives also meant reviewing laws and policies that created the red tape.

"A lot of people have been wrongfully convicted because all cases are handled by general courts," he noted. The Assistant Minister assured the councillors that the government was committed to providing services through all the sectors, hence various programmes had to run concurrently.

He noted that while he acknowledged that the health sector was facing challenges, plans were underway to address them.

From Gamalete District Baleseng Batlotleng reports that councillors have called for a holistic and comprehensive constitutional review. In an meeting addressed by Minister of Justice and Correctional Services, Mr Nelson Ramaotwana as part of the nationwide consultative engagement on the establishment of the Constitutional Court. Councillors expressed similar views on the proposed timing of the establishment of the ConCourt citing that more focus should be channelled to more pressing national issues like medicine shortages and dilapidated school infrastructure.

Taung East Cllr Mr Vincent Nawa said the way the proposed establishment was presented was a piecemeal approach which could not be entertained and that there was a strong suspicion that someone was pushing their political agenda.

He categorically stated that there was a pressing need for a comprehensive review of the constitution and not the bit by bit approach proposed by government.

Cllr Nawa said the current judicial set up was sufficient to handle any legal matter and therefore there was no need for a specialised court to be established. Otse Cllr Mr Tom Isaacs cited wrong timing of the establishment of the ConCourt and said focus should be given to pressing matters like food security, animal health in the advent of FMD infections and the deteriorating health sector among others. He urged government to restore trust in the current justice system and also equip it with human resource or make a complete overhaul for efficient service delivery by the judiciary. Mogobane Cllr Mr Sisimogang Abram expressed confidence on the set up of the ConCourt saying it would develop the country's constitutional democratic system and strengthen the judicial process.

He said government was seeking input from the public as part of the many steps taken towards the review of the constitution. Gamalete Deputy Paramount Chief Kgosi Tsimane Mokgosi said government was a powerful tool needed for checks and balances.

Kgosi Tsimane said from what he observed Batswana needed broader national consultation and be educated on matters relating to the ConCourt on a more transparent approach.

For his part Malete Land Board Chairperson Mr Kgotsi Mathe asked the minister on how the proposed institution would protect the customary land rights. He also questioned whether an individual would directly approach the ConCourt if they were not satisfied with the decision of the Land Tribunal, High Court or the Court of Appeal. Mr Mathe also wanted clarity on how the supreme body would deal with the existing backlog on land related legal matters.

Minister Ramaotwana appreciated councillors' contributions and said the purpose of their engagement was aimed at gathering views and inputs. He said part of the intention to set up the ConCourt was to expedite the backlog of constitutional matters before the existing courts.

He said as a specialised court, the ConCourt had a specialised jurisdiction and that non constitutional matters would reach it only by way of appeal. He said the focus was also to engage experts in the field of constitutional matters.

ConCourt to provide avenue for recourse - Sekai

While some residents of Mochudi agreed with its establishment, some were of the view that it was being prioritised over the more urgent constitutional review process. Others argued that it was an important step toward developing Botswana's constitutional democratic system, where Batswana would have the opportunity to hold government accountable for safeguarding fundamental human rights.

Mmoniemang Motsamai
MOCHUDI

During a packed kgotla meeting that was addressed by Minister of International Relations, Dr Pheny Butale in Mochudi, the debate centred on some key questions such as whether a Constitutional Court was necessary; the legal processes required to establish one; and its relationship with existing courts and whether it would replace the Constitution.

Residents submitted that there was no urgency in consulting about the establishment of the Constitutional Court when there were more pressing matters to deal with such as the health crisis and bad roads, to mention, but a few.

Some viewed it as a court that would provide the leeway for murderers to do as they pleased, alleging that the court would provide room for them to escape death the penalty.

Most residents were of the idea that there was need for an immediate comprehensive review of the Constitution instead of channelling funds towards setting up a Constitutional Court.

Others, on one hand, argued that there has not been sufficient consultation regarding the urgency of establishing the court.

First to take the podium was Bakgatla Deputy Chief, Kgosi Bana Sekai, who rallied behind the Constitutional Court's establishment, reasoning that it was meant to provide an avenue for recourse. He alleged that there had been insinuations in the past that certain cases would have been resolved effectively had they been heard by a Constitutional Court.

Mr Bothe Kgetse questioned the rationale for the court's establishment, and further insinuated that it was likely that it was going to serve some political interests. He argued that many issues had been resolved without a Constitutional Court in place hence it was unjustifiable to argue that not having it affected the dispensation of justice.

"The Unity Dow case law is the example in place that has showed that issues can be resolved without a Constitutional Court," he opined. Ms Kutlwano Odirile, a lawyer by profession, supported its establishment reasoning that it was an important step towards developing Botswana's constitutional democratic system, where Batswana would have the opportunity to hold government accountable for safeguarding fundamental human rights.

For his part, Minister Butale explained that the Constitutional Court would not replace the Constitution.

"These are two different things; the Constitutional Court is meant to provide an avenue for fair arbitrary process," he said.

In countering the argument that not sufficient consultation had been done with the public and other critical stakeholders, he said consultations were continuing countrywide and that there would be a referendum once the consultation process was completed.

Dr Butale acknowledged residents' concerns about the health crisis and assured them that government was working hard to improve the public health system through among others things, providing sufficient medicines.

"I appreciate your reservations, but this is the state we find ourselves in as a government and we are working hard to bring about normalcy,' he said, adding that the State of Public Health Emergency that President Advocate Duma Boko had enforced was one of the ways of restoring the optimal functionality of the public health system. BOPA

Mogoditshane residents welcome ConCourt

Keetile Bontsibokae
MOGODITSHANE

Some residents of Mogoditshane have expressed support for the proposed establishment of a Constitutional Court (ConCourt).

The residents shared their sentiments at a consultative kgotla meeting addressed by the Minister of International Relations, Dr Pheny Butale on Tuesday. Dr Butale emphasised that dialogue was the cornerstone of Botswana's democracy. He noted that the culture of consultation extended beyond domestic affairs as it was also reflected in the country's foreign policy, earning Botswana international recognition.

"As we reassess the national Constitution, we want to establish a court that will be directly responsible for addressing violations of rights as they arise," said Dr Butale.

Dr Butale also reassured residents who were suspicious that the ConCourt will primarily focus on abolishing death penalty that the Court's primary role will be to interpret the Constitution, safeguard fundamental human rights and expedite constitutional matters currently handled by the High Court. He stressed that any law conflicting with constitutional principles will be set aside, underscoring the importance of vigilance in protecting constitutional supremacy.

Dr Butale described the ConCourt as long overdue, calling it a redeemer for citizens who have been unfairly treated and denied justice. He emphasised that the court would be accessible to all, regardless of financial status or the formality of their submissions.

"If your case involves a violation of human rights, you cannot be sidelined simply because you are poor or your documents are imperfect," he said.

He also highlighted the need to strengthen traditional courts, warning that reliance on foreign legal systems such as Dutch law and common law sometimes undermined Botswana's cultural heritage. One of the residents, Mr Pelonomi Molebatsi welcomed the initiative, even though noting that lack of clarity on communication from some public officers has fueled misunderstandings about the ConCourt, especially amid economic challenges.

While supportive of the ConCourt, Elizabeth Kenosi cautioned that adding another court could worsen existing case backlogs. Ms Dineo Phatsima endorsed the proposal, indicating that government's reasoning was genuine. Some residents were hoping that the ConCourt will among others help restoring property rights, particularly land, which they felt had been unjustly taken from them.

Member of Parliament for Mogoditshane East, Mr Letlhogonolo Barongwang, concurred with residents who were in support of establishing the ConCourt. Mr Barongwang said he had long advocated for the establishment of the ConCourt, adding that the majority of the residents were in support of the proposed development.

Meanwhile some residents were challenging the timing of the proposal to establish ConCourt, urging government to focus on current pressing issues such as shortage of medicines in hospitals, poor road infrastructure and dilapidated public facilities. BOPA

Councillors voice mixed views on Constitutional Court

Marvin Motlhabane
KANYE

During nationwide consultations on establishing a Constitutional Court, councillors in Kanye expressed a mix of support and pointed criticisms regarding the proposal's process, timing, and potential implications.

The consultations held Monday at Tomela council chamber were led by Minister of Justice Mr Nelson Ramaotwana.

While ruling party-aligned councillors largely welcomed the initiative, others raised significant concerns.

Councillor Shimane Thelo of Lotlhakane East/Diabo questioned the urgency of the reform amid pressing national priorities. He highlighted the substantial financial costs of setting up and maintaining a specialised court, suggesting that resources would be better allocated to urgent issues such as healthcare, unemployment, and service delivery.

Some councillors also expressed worries about risks of judicial overreach or politicisation, which could potentially undermine rather than strengthen the independence of the judiciary.

Despite these reservations, many councillors commended Minister Ramaotwana for his clear and accessible presentation. They praised his ability to explain complex legal concepts in relatable terms, which helped address initial doubts and foster understanding. They appreciated his patient, direct engagement with questions and his consultative approach.

Several councillors noted that the minister's emphasis on the court's advantages such as faster resolution of constitutional matters, reduced backlog pressure on the High Court, and enhanced protections for citizens' rights, aligned well with local governance priorities.

The discussion reflected considerable enthusiasm among many attendees, who described the proposal as a forward-thinking reform consistent with Botswana's democratic values. Others highlighted the minister's transparent handling of the process and his direct involvement in district-level consultations as evidence of genuine commitment to inclusive dialogue. In response, Minister Ramaotwana stressed that each sector of government has distinct responsibilities and urged citizens to segregate and address issues within their relevant ministries, for instance, health matters should be directed to the Ministry of Health.

He explained that his ministry operates under specific targets and priorities, one of which was the establishment of the Constitutional Court within the current administration's five-year term. Mr Ramaotwana described Botswana as a progressive nation whose development spans all sectors, including judicial structures as part of broader transformation.

He reiterated that the consultations aimed to gather diverse input and build consensus, emphasising the court's role in bolstering human rights protections and judicial efficiency as a progressive advancement.

The Kanye session underscores emerging divisions in the national debate, with enthusiastic local support in some quarters contrasting with scepticism or opposition elsewhere. As consultations continue through mid-February 2026, these varied perspectives are expected to influence the trajectory of any proposed constitutional amendment. BOPA

Flood halt
Zimbabwe-
Mozambique rail
traffic

HARARE - The National Railways of Zimbabwe (NRZ) said on Wednesday that it has temporarily closed the Harare-Mutare railway line following a major derailment at Odzi, a village in Manicaland Province. The closure of the Harare-Mutare line, as well as the Chicualacuala-Maputo railway line, which was closed two weeks ago, means that there is currently no rail traffic moving to and from Mozambique, the NRZ said in a post on social media. The derailment at Odzi occurred when tracks on the section were washed away due to heavy rains that fell on Sunday, affecting four wagons loaded with ferrochrome destined for the Port of Beira in neighboring Mozambique, the NRZ said. Xinhua

Kenya woos
Chinese investors to boost film sector

NAIROBI - Kenya is intensifying efforts to develop its film industry by seeking increased investment and collaboration with Chinese investors, a government official said on Wednesday. Sudi Wandabusi, chairperson of the Kenya Film Commission, told journalists in Nairobi, Kenya that the East African nation was keen to tap into China's financial and technological support to emerge as a regional hub for film production. "Through co-production with Chinese investors, we will also be able to showcase our movies in the vast Chinese market," Wandabusi said during a media briefing on the 14th edition of the Kalasha International Film and TV Market, Festival and Awards, which is scheduled to take place from April 28 to May 2. The Kalasha International Film and TV Market, Festival and Awards is Kenya's premier film industry event. Xinhua

US Federal Reserve keeps
rates unchanged

WASHINGTON DC - The US Federal Reserve on Wednesday held rates steady, marking a pause in the recent cutting cycle. In line with expectations, the central bank's Federal Open Market Committee voted for key interest rates to remain in the range of 3.5 per cent to 3.75 per cent. That put a stop to three straight quarters of rate cuts, which were an effort to cushion risks to the economy, including labor weakness, but inflation and broad uncertainty were also concerns. "Available indicators suggest that economic activity has been expanding at a solid pace. Job gains have remained low, and the unemployment rate has shown some signs of stabilisation," according to a statement released after Wednesday's meeting. Xinhua

More than 8 000 hectares of crops were submerged after heavy downpours in the area.

Hope remains for Pandamatenga farmers recovery

By Portia Keetile
PANDAMATENGA

Following the recent heavy downpours in Pandamatenga that left farms submerged in water, the path to recovery for Botswana's food basket hinges on water to recede and soil moisture to reach a workable consistency.

The one-in-200- years' storm on January 21 which dropped over 150mm of rain submerged over 8 000 hectares of crops from sorghum, sunflower, maize, onion, tomatoes, beans.

Pandamatenga remains critical to national food security contributing 47 per cent to Botswana's national crop production mostly sorghum, millet, beans, wheat, chickpeas supported by the 90 000 metric tonnes grain storage silos hosted in Pandamatenga.

Department of Crop Production-agronomist for Pandamatenga Commercial Farmers, Ms Emeliah Magosi told BOPA that there was hope for Botswana's food basket, as the window for replanting remained open to February and March for Pandamatenga.

However she said replanting would be enabled by a shift from heavy rains to scattered showers and warmer temperatures for the cotton soils to hold just adequate moisture.

Farmers might be compelled to change cropping plans, to suit the high soil moisture and ideally plant wheat, chickpeas, sunflower and mung- beans, Ms Magosi said.

She explained that it was premature to analyse the damages suffered by the 8 000 hectares planted crops as mostly were still submerged in water.

This translates to a variation of risks from nutrients loss, stunted growth, and rotting.

Hope remains for farmers to return to full operations and optimise on their equipment because they have sufficient farming implements to accelerate production.

With Pandamatenga being a floods prone area, Ms Magosi said government installed drainage and roads infrastructure within the commercial farms to address such occurrences.

"The purpose of the drainage system in the farming area was to address unfavourable conditions such as floods and its only that the recent rains were a rare occurrence and without the trenches it could have been a calamity," she said.

Consequent to heavy rains, Ms Magosi said risked to be expected include pests outbreak, mostly quelea birds and army worms.

High humidity also poses a risk of fungus which demands a lot of output from farmers to spray their crops.

Recapping on last season's performance, Ms Magosi remarked that a total of 27 247 hectares of sorghum was planted by commercial farmers producing 81 369 tonnes.

She said a total of 5 568 hectares of cowpeas was planted producing 4 338 tonnes while 2 032 hectares of beans was planted and 1 902 tonnes harvested. BOPA

Zutswa residents endorse proposed salt and soda ash partnership

Thuso Kgakatsi
ZUTSHWA

For generations, the vast salt resources of Zutshwa have lain largely untapped, sustaining livelihoods on a modest scale but never quite unlocking their full potential. Now, residents of the village believe that moment has finally arrived.

The Zutshwa community has unanimously endorsed a proposal for the Qhaa-Qhing Conservation Trust to partner with a private company in the production of salt and soda ash, a move widely viewed as a turning point for both the village and the wider Hukuntsi sub-district.

At the heart of the proposal is the expansion of operations at the Zutshwa Salt Mine, a community-based project run by the Qhaa-Qhing Conservation Trust.

Established in 1989 through the Rural Industrial Innovation Centre with support from the Cooperation for Research Development and Education, the mine has also benefited over the years from the Poverty Eradication Programme through the Rural Development Council.

Zutswa residents endorse proposed salt and soda ash partnership

Despite producing 99.9 percent high-quality salt, the mine has struggled to operate at full capacity due to persistent financial constraints.

These challenges have resulted in lost sales and revenue, as production has consistently fallen short of market demand.

It is against this background that the trust has remained open to strategic partnerships, a stance that has now attracted interest from Zimbabwe-based Berhard Development Corporation, through its subsidiary, 9th Hour Projects.

Addressing residents at a kgotla meeting attended by key stakeholders, including the Embassy of Botswana in Zimbabwe, Botswana Investment and Trade Centre, Hukuntsi District Council and the District Commissioner's Office, 9th Hour Projects Executive Officer, Mr Bernard Mutanga, outlined an ambitious proposal to develop a soda ash project alongside salt production.

Mr Mutanga said the project would tap into Zutshwa's abundant trona deposits to produce salt and high-quality soda ash for the global market.

He revealed that the company had already secured about 1 900 hectares of land in Tshesebe, where it plans to manufacture steel using by-products from salt production.

He further disclosed that Berhard Development Corporation intended to establish steel manufacturing, iron processing and lithium plants in Botswana, adding that Zutshwa's reputation for high-quality salt was a key factor in attracting the company's interest.

The proposed partnership, he explained, sought to leverage Botswana's position as the world's second-largest producer of soda ash, a resource that would also feed into lithium product manufacturing.

Beyond production, Mr Mutanga emphasised skills development and sustainability, noting that the company had partnered with local institutions such as the Botswana University of Science and Technology (BUiST) to promote skills transfer, training and research.

If implemented, the project is expected to create between 15 000 and 20 000 jobs nationally, with Zutshwa alone set to benefit from about 300 direct jobs and 450 indirect jobs. Annual output is projected at 200 000 tonnes of soda ash and 800 000 tonnes of salt.

Phase One of the project, pending approval, will begin at the existing mine site and focus on establishing management structures, conducting feasibility studies and securing funding to upgrade facilities. The first year will prioritise community development programmes, while years three to five will see expansion of initiatives such as maintenance of the Zutshwa–Hukuntsi road. From years six to ten, attention will shift to sustaining and evaluating these programmes.

Mr Mutanga assured residents that the company had the financial muscle to deliver the project, with lender commitments already secured. He stressed that the community's equity stake would be free-carried, meaning residents would not be required to contribute capital or bear financial risk.

"The percentage of equity stake for the community will be guided by industry benchmarks and comparable projects in Botswana," he said.

Supporting the initiative, Botswana's Ambassador to Zimbabwe, Ms Sarah Molosiwa, noted that Zutshwa's salt resources had existed for more than three generations but had never been exploited at scale.

She said the proposed partnership aligned with the embassy's mandate to strengthen bilateral relations and attract investments that deliver tangible benefits to Botswana. Ms Molosiwa added that negotiations with 9th Hour Projects began nearly two years ago, citing the company's strong credentials and its collaboration with BUiST as proof of credibility.

"It is within this context that the embassy identified 9th Hour Projects as a potential partner due to its strong business credentials and proven capacity," she said.

She urged residents to carefully consider the opportunity, noting that successful implementation could see Zutshwa evolve into a fully-fledged town.

Echoing these sentiments, Qhaa-Qhing Conservation Trust chairperson Mr Taolo Gabohumisiwe called on the community to remain united as preparations move forward.

He said the trust was ready to engage and confident that, through collective commitment, challenges could be overcome.

For many residents, the proposal represents long-awaited hope.

As voices from the kgotla meeting made clear, the community believes the partnership could finally unlock economic growth and address the persistent unemployment that has shadowed the village for years.

If realised, Zutswa's salt may soon become the foundation of a transformed future. BOPA

Germany lowers 2026 growth outlook to one per cent

BERLIN - Germany's federal government on Wednesday lowered its forecast for economic growth in 2026 to 1 per cent, down 0.3 percentage points from its previous autumn projection, while stressing the need for investment and reforms to revive the economy.

Presenting the government's annual economic report, Economy and Energy Minister Katherina Reiche said the downgrade reflected a weaker-than-expected recovery in the second half of 2025, which continued to weigh on the outlook entering the new year.

Also, large-scale fiscal spending on infrastructure and defense, rolled out last year, has so far delivered less economic stimulus than policymakers had hoped. "The economy is slowly picking up speed again," the report says.

After several years of contraction or stagnation, the expected growth in 2026 sends a positive signal, but does not yet amount to a decisive turning point, it added, as the expansion is set to rely mainly on higher public spending, including government investment in infrastructure, alongside tax relief and lower energy costs for businesses.

According to the report, inflation-adjusted public spending is forecast to rise by 2.4 per cent in 2026, while fixed capital investment is expected to grow by 3 per cent, pointing to an investment-led recovery.

By contrast, exports could increase by just 0.8 per cent for the year, leaving foreign trade unlikely to provide a meaningful boost to growth, the report says.

Export-oriented sectors remain under pressure amid geopolitical tensions and persistent trade policy uncertainty, it adds. US tariffs introduced in early 2025 have already weighed on German exports, while economists expect their full impact to become more visible in 2026.

Data from the Federal Statistical Office showed that Germany's exports to the United States fell 9.4 per cent year-on-year in the first 11 months of 2025, with shipments of cars, car parts and machinery among the hardest hit.

To strengthen competitiveness and economic resilience, the federal government reiterated the need for structural reforms in its annual economic report, the flagship policy document setting out Berlin's economic strategy for the year ahead.

Outlining six priority areas on the supply side, the report highlights reform plans to cut red tape, modernise infrastructure, foster innovation, reduce energy costs, strengthen external economic resilience and expand labor supply through reforms to the social security system. Xinhua

BDF Military Justice System transformative

Booster Mogapi
MOGODITSHANE

Chief Justice Gaolapelwe Ketlogetswe has hailed the launch of the Botswana Defence Force (BDF) Military Justice System as an indication of a major transformative shift in the justice system of the military.

Speaking at the launch of the initiative at the Sir Seretse Khama Barracks on Wednesday, Justice Ketlogetswe said as a nation built on the pillars of democracy, peace and justice, the system marked a bold step taken toward making fairness and accountability in the heart of the military institution.

He said the rule of law and accountability were the foundation of discipline, service and public trust.

He said the system upheld due process for all service members, preventing bias and aligning with protraction against inhuman treatment and arbitrary violations of human rights enshrined in the Constitution of Botswana.

Furthermore, he said the military justice system protected the force by upholding discipline while simultaneously safeguarding the rights of all individuals.

He added that without fairness, it became a blind instrument of oppression, and without accountability it eroded the trust that bound soldiers together.

He further commended BDF

Commander, General Mpho Mophuting for his visionary leadership in championing the initiative, which guaranteed fundamental rights such as the right to life, liberty and the right to security and protection of the law.

Justice Ketlogetswe said when General Mophuting took over the command of the BDF, he promised, with resources permitting, to modernise and strengthen their defense capability.

General Mophuting, for his part, said the occasion represented the culmination of a deliberate and sustained reform journey anchored in the enactment of the BDF Act of 2018, which repealed and re-enacted the 1977 Act.

He said the Act reflected Parliament's intention to modernise military justice and to ensure that discipline within the defence force was administered lawfully, impartially and in full conformity with constitutional values.

"As we move into the implementation phase, we do so mindful that the credibility of this military justice system will ultimately be measured by its fair, consistent and impartial application," he said.

He said they valued the continued engagement, guidance and oversight of the judiciary and the legal fraternity as essential partners in sustaining legality, public confidence and institutional integrity.

In his welcome remarks, Judge Advocate General, Major Abel

Motaung said the development was a historic occasion that marked a significant milestone in the evolution of the BDF.

He said the launch came after the review of the BDF Act, which was an exercise that came with several changes among them the establishment of the BDF military justice system.

Major Motaung further said the system aligned with his intent of reforming the BDF.

He said the Office of the Judge Advocate General was a fully functional office and the launch formalised the military justice system.

He added the office would be operating through a Jury, under a free and fair justice system that promoted impartiality.

Meanwhile, the officers of the Judge Advocate General office took an oath and were sworn in.

Colonel Ontisitse Ntloore was sworn in as deputy judge advocate general, while Major Keorape-tse Sereetsi and Major Gaolathe Kgopa were sworn in as judicial officers.

Major Alfred Baikakedi was sworn in as court administration officer, while Lt. General Dr Joshua Gabothuse was sworn in as Directorate of Military Prosecutions director while Major Keitumetse Lerothodi was sworn in as the deputy director.

Major Molatlhegi Jubilee was sworn in as Trial Defence Services officer. BOPA

'Let us up cervical cancer awareness'

Lesedi Thatayamodimo
GABORONE

Cervical cancer is deceptive. It grows quietly, deep in the body, where the sun does not shine, where no one can see the storm brewing.

Early stages rarely cause pain or obvious symptoms. And so many women delay screening, telling themselves they will go later.

"Kgang ya teng ha e ntsee sentle gotlhelele," says Dr Kesegofetse Chabaesele, a family specialist based at Premium Medical Centre in Gaborone.

Even women with better access to healthcare resources choose to postpone screening, simply because the danger feels distant and invisible, until it is not.

Some, she says delay screening, 'not out of ignorance, but because life is busy, the process feels uncomfortable and the risk feels abstract'.

In most cases, by the time the symptoms appear, the disease is often advanced and treatment becomes more aggressive with uncertain outcomes.

"Lives are forever changed, due to cervical cancer or lost," she said.

She reiterates that cervical cancer remained the number one cause of cancer-related deaths among women in Botswana.

"This is a fact that should shake us, yet, somehow, it continues to exist on the periphery of national attention," she says.

While October is drenched in pink for breast cancer awareness, and prostate cancer campaigns enjoy steady visibility despite far lower mortality rates, cervical cancer remains largely unspoken, quiet, overlooked and deadly.

She wonders why there are no nationwide urgency around it.

Why the corporate world is largely silent as well as reasons laboratories and health stakeholders do not push cervical cancer screening with the same intensity as other cancers? she asks rhetorically.

Dr Chabaesele says what is painful about cervical cancer is that it disproportionately affects younger women in their 30s and 40s.

Most of these women, she says are still building careers, raising children, supporting families and carrying entire households on their backs.

Personally, she reveals that she lost a sister to cervical cancer, who died at the age of 38, who was also a breadwinner.

Her illness introduced me to a side of our healthcare system I had never known, from limited access to screening, to treatment delays, to the immense economic strain that comes with prolonged illness, she says.

"Lives are forever changed or lost due to cervical cancer."

Another sister, she says survived, adding that survival did not mean restoration.

She lived with severe post-radiation complications that affected her quality of life every single day. Her body tells a story of what happens when diagnosis comes late," she adds.

Dr Chabaesele therefore calls for a collective responsibility, among all women that as part of January goals, they should do a life-saving action; to get cervical cancer screening, a decision, which may save their lives.

She points out that in March, her birthday month, she will offer free cervical cancer screening in the village where her sister is buried.

"It feels right that life-saving action should rise from a place of loss."

She says her firm intention is to organise healthcare professionals, screening equipment, transport, community mobilisation, awareness materials, funding, partnerships and any contribution, in any shape or form.

"This campaign will be a gift to myself and I hope, a gift to many women."

Dr Chabaesele is of the view that cervical cancer should not remain a silent emergency, 'but instead it should be talked about, and it should not be the one we postpone screening for, until it is too late'. BOPA

PUBLIC NOTICE

The Government of Botswana recognises the importance of a free, independent, and ethical media as the backbone of democracy and as such seeks to solidify those commitments by establishing a legal framework that fosters press freedom, journalistic integrity, and responsible reporting and information dissemination. As such, the Government appointed a Task Team/Force in March, 2025 to review and reform existing media laws and such other laws that may adversely impact on media freedom, ensuring they uphold press freedom, access to information, and accountability.

Consequently, the Government wishes to consult the general public/nation further on the Draft Media Bill and its pronouncement especially on the establishment of the Media Regulatory Council in Botswana, setting out its governance, membership, functions and funding model to ensure sustainability. The proposed framework combines self-regulation within a statutory framework, to safeguard media freedom of expression while maintaining accountability, respect for human rights and ethical standards to eliminate inaccurate reporting and violation of other persons rights across both traditional and digital media.

Council determined to turn bus rank into vibrant hub

Keetile Bontsibokae
MOLEPOLOLE

Following the reopening of the Molepolole bus rank in December last year, council authorities are determined to turn the facility into a success story.

The bus rank will tomorrow, be a hive of activity as it hosts an activation event dubbed: Tlatsa Bus Renke, designed to transform the facility into a vibrant hub and market for small businesses.

The initiative, spearheaded by Kweneng District Council chairperson, Mr Ontefetse Rankhibidu, aims to encourage residents to embrace the bus rank’s potential.

He described Tlatsa Bus Renke as a family fun day packed with activities including horse racing, quad bike rides, children’s games, aerobics and live performances from choirs and folklore guitarists.

“We have about fifteen artists, mostly Molepolole natives, who volunteered to perform.

Their participation shows that if residents unite, this bus rank can be fully utilised and the memories of its abandonment erased,” Mr Rankhibidu said.

He said the entertainment lineup would feature a blend of established names and emerging talent including Phemphethe, Scar, Ditiro, Tinnere, Ju-Matere, Ali Basha, Bafenyi, Ras Lista, Afro Convicts, Dikopane, Mokwepa, Kwena Madiba, Alpha, Still Growing, Ntsweng Classic Pantsolas, Kgweba, Macrona, Mmurubele and King Infa C. JC results show improvement

The Botswana Examinations Council (BEC) has released the 2025 Junior Certificate Examination (JCE) results, showing a modest overall improvement in performance compared to 2024, despite an increase in the number of candidates who sat for the examinations.

According to a release from BEC, the overall pass rate for 2025 cohort stands at 83.7 per cent.

The release further states that a total of 47 880 candidates sat for the examinations, representing a 2.62 per cent increase from 45 261 candidates in 2024. Of the total candidature, 24 542 (51.3 per cent) were female, while 23 270 (48.7 per cent) were male.

According to the release, female candidates outperformed their male counterparts in the 2025 examinations.

“Performance at the upper end of the grading scale improved compared to the previous year. The proportion of candidates attaining Grade A or better rose from 1.50 per cent in 2024 to 2.10 per cent in 2025, reflecting an improvement of 0.60 percentage points,” the release states.

Similarly, candidates achieving Grade B or better increased by 1.10 percentage points, from 12.80 per cent in 2024 to 13.90 per cent in 2025, while those attaining Grade C or better improved from 38.50 per cent to 39.60 per cent, representing a 1.10 percentage point increase. “On the other hand, performance declined by 2.10 per cent at Grade D or better and by 1.80 per cent at Grade E or better, respectively.

Worth noting is that 16 per cent (7 239) of candidates, compared to 14.40 per cent (6 132) in the previous year, did not meet the minimum requirements for the award of Grade E and were assigned the letter ‘U’,” the release adds.

A press release further states at individual grades, 43 candidates (0.10 per cent), compared to 16 in the previous year, attained Merit while 898 candidates (2.00 per cent) obtained Grade A, up from 617 candidates (1.50 per cent) in 2024.

The release says that 5 336 candidates (11.80 per cent) attained Grade B, compared to 4 800 (11.30 per cent) in the previous year while 11 568 candidates (25.60 per cent) attained Grade C, compared to 10 912 candidates (25.70 per cent) in 2024.

Grade D, according to the release was awarded to 14 001 candidates (31.00 per cent), down from 14 524 candidates (34.20 per cent), while 5 888 candidates (13.10 per cent) obtained Grade E, a slight increase from 5 420 candidates (12.80 per cent) in the previous year.

BEC further clarifies that candidates who did not meet the grading requirements at component level were assigned the letter X at syllabus and/or qualification level, which the council notes that this classification is usually temporary and is expected to be resolved during the enquiries period. BOPA

Donation strengthens conservation work

Gaolethoo Kgatitswe
MAUN

The European Union (EU), through the Kavango-Zambezi Transfrontier Conservation Area (KAZA) has donated a vehicle to Communities Living Amongst Wildlife Sustainably (CLAWS) to strengthen the organisation's work in promoting coexistence between communities, livestock and wildlife across the KAZA landscape.

The vehicle will be used by a wildlife veterinarian to improve disease surveillance, prevention, and response at the livestock-wildlife interface.

Handing over the vehicle in Maun on Monday, KAZA executive director Dr Nyambe Nyambe said the donation represented more than material support as it symbolised partnership, shared responsibility and a collective commitment to sustainable conservation and development in the KAZA region.

Dr Nyambe further said CLAWS played a critical role in translating regional conservation strategies into practical, community-level interventions, noting that while many EU NaturAfrica initiatives operated at policy level, CLAWS delivered targeted technical support on the ground.

For her part, programme director at CLAWS, Ms Catja Orford said the organisation's mandate is to support communities living alongside wildlife by improving animal health, strengthening livestock management systems, and reducing human-wildlife conflict in ways that also protect livelihoods.

"One of our key interventions is the introduction of a communal herding system, where livestock is herded around the clock," she said, noting that the approach promoted human-wildlife coexistence, reduced conflicts, and helped manage grazing land for conservation purposes.

Furthermore, Ms Orford said limited mobility had previously made it difficult for CLAWS to consistently reach remote communities and implement its programmes effectively.

"The lack of reliable transport affected our ability to reach communities regularly and respond quickly to animal health and conflict-related issues," she said.

Speaking on behalf of the Permanent Secretary in the Ministry of Environment and Tourism, Dr Rentin Mafonko of the Ministry of Lands and Agriculture thanked the European Union for financing the project through the EU NaturAfrica Fund, describing the EU as a long-standing development partner in Botswana's conservation sector.

Dr Mafonko said the work carried out by CLAWS aligned with government priorities, particularly in addressing veterinary challenges in red-zone areas where disease control affected access to export markets.

He highlighted initiatives such as Commodity-Based Trading and Herding for Health as practical models that promoted coexistence while supporting a private-sector-led and export-oriented economy.

North West District Council (NWDC) chairperson, Mr Itumeleng Kelebetseng called on Batswana to take collective responsibility for environmental protection, saying conservation efforts were vital for the benefit of future generations. BOPA

UNAUTHORISED LEASING OF SIM CARDS AND MOBILE MONEY WALLETS

BOCRA has noted, with concern, that some members of the public are leasing (hiring out) or re-selling registered SIM cards and mobile money wallets to third parties. This practice contravenes the ethos behind registration of SIM cards. BOCRA advises the public that the ramifications for contravention include:

- Criminal Liability – In case the SIM card or mobile wallet is used to commit fraud, money laundering, scams, or any other illegal activity, the registered owner will be held liable.
- Identity Theft – Sharing your registered SIM card exposes personal information and financial data to misuse.
- Loss of Funds – You may lose access to your mobile money account and any funds stored within it.
- Service Suspension – SIM cards found to be used in contravention of SIM Card Registration and KYC regulatory instruments will be deactivated by the respective service provider.

The public is therefore advised to desist and refrain from the leasing and/or re-selling of SIM cards and related mobile money wallets with immediate effect.

Mahama calls for stronger relations with China

ACCRA

Ghana President, John Dramani Mahama has called for stronger relations with China, stressing the need to deepen cooperation across key sectors. Speaking Tuesday during a farewell visit by outgoing Chinese Ambassador to Ghana Tong Defa, Mahama underscored the importance of enhanced collaboration between the two countries in security, counterterrorism and trade to achieve mutual benefits. Expressing appreciation for China's support, Mahama commended Beijing for its role in negotiating Ghana's debt restructuring and for its continued assistance to the country's development. He also suggested the establishment of a payment and settlement system between the two countries to further boost economic cooperation. For his part, Tong praised Mahama for successfully steering Ghana's economic recovery during the first year of his tenure. He said China's zero-tariff arrangement for Ghanaian exports would soon be implemented, and reiterated the need to further strengthen cooperation in areas including industry, trade, mining, science and technology. Xinhua

Lunchbox Hub revolutionises school meals

Lorato Gaofise
GABORONE

As dawn breaks across Botswana, thousands of parents begin a familiar, frantic routine of rushing to get children ready, juggling work responsibilities and trying to pack lunchboxes that are nutritious, appealing and filling.

For the founders of Lunchbox Hub, Larona Mokgosi and Thato Keipidile, this daily pressure point became the seed of a business that is quietly transforming school meal delivery. What began as a personal solution has blossomed into a 100 per cent female-owned enterprise dedicated to fueling the next generation.

Born out of the shared frustration of working parents, Lunchbox Hub addresses the challenge of providing balanced meals amidst demanding schedules.

Mokgosi, the company's strategic partnerships and assurance manager, explains in an interview that the idea emerged as a response to the mental and physical strain of early mornings dominated by meal planning and grocery shopping.

"Since we genuinely enjoy cooking, we decided to turn that passion into a solution for other parents facing the same challenge," says Mokgosi.

Today, the company supplies packed meals to over 100 students across 24 schools in the Gaborone area.

"To ensure we balance out the children's overall nutrition, especially their sugar intake, our menu is approved by a nutritionist and all our drinks are strictly served in 250ml bottles," she adds.

From Monday to Thursday, the focus is on health, featuring 100 per cent fruit juice, zero-sugar iced tea and flavoured or still water. The menu rotates daily and includes beef stir-fry, penne pasta with chicken drumsticks, wraps, croissants stuffed with chicken mayo and fresh salads.

On Fridays, they enjoy a 'cheat day' called

The attention to detail extends to the packaging. Each eco-friendly box is labelled with the child's name and class and even includes educational stickers featuring matching games and fun facts to engage young minds during lunch.

Beyond convenience, Lunchbox Hub is rooted in social responsibility. Operations manager, Keipidile highlights their Feed-a-Child initiative, where unused meals are donated to children in need.

"We are also planning to launch a Sponsor-a-School programme aimed at supporting government schools in underserved areas," Keipidile adds.

Currently operating out of Block 8 Industrial in Gaborone, the company employs three Batswana chefs. While they have outsourced logistics to a local firm, Drop It Courier Services, they are leaning into technology, utilising a website and developing a mobile app to streamline ordering for busy parents.

"As parents ourselves, we understand the importance of knowing what our children eat daily. This is why our goal is peace of mind."

"I have always had time management challenges when it came to shopping and meal preparation. Ensuring variety was difficult. I used to prepare the same meals and, over time, they became monotonous and he wouldn't eat. Lunchbox Hub offers a wide range of food that Weno enjoys. It is an innovative, convenient and affordable solution," she says.

Weno now enjoys nutritious and varied meals daily.

Thebe is delighted as the service has been a 'lifesaver' that saved her hours of shopping and cooking.

"I would gladly recommend the service in a heartbeat to other parents because of its convenience, professionalism, healthy approach and the variety they offer," she adds.

Despite the hurdles of limited funding and complex logistics, Lunchbox Hub continues to grow. The founders envision expanding into a broader food solutions brand with a deep social impact. For now, they are content reshaping the school day, one box at a time. BOPA

Inaugural animé focused event March

Animé fandom is growing in Botswana. The country is now putting its best foot forward to celebrate a culture that has long existed within fans' bedrooms, group chats and online forums, but rarely in the country's public spaces.

Benita Magopane

Animé has found a home in Botswana, with emerging events such as Animé Afurotaku, taking centre stage and providing a platform for animé enthusiasts to network, exchange culture and have fun.

With animé fandom and cosplay rapidly growing globally in major hubs such as Tokyo and Los Angeles as well as in African countries including Nigeria and Senegal, Botswana is now putting its best foot forward to celebrate a culture that has long existed within fans' bedrooms, group chats and online forums, but rarely in the country's public spaces.

For the first time, on March 21, Animé Afurotaku will host Botswana's inaugural animé-focused event, giving fans the opportunity to express themselves through cosplay. Cosplay involves dressing up as favourite characters from anime or manga (Japanese comics), recreating not only the clothing but also the character's personality, gestures, and presence.

Fans will also take part in anime trivia, a ramen-eating contest, manga discussions, and other interactive activities. In an interview, event organiser, Charity Segaise, explained that Afurotaku is a combination of the words Afro and otaku, with otaku meaning an anime fan and Afro stemming from the word African.

"Animé Afurotaku means African anime.

This event, which is open to fans of all ages and genders, will celebrate both Japanese and African cultures," said Segaise, adding that the event will be free to attend.

She highlighted that anime was not 'just cartoons' but a powerful storytelling medium that explores serious and adult themes such as war, trauma, and mental health.

It also spans a wide range of genres, including thrillers, documentaries, and political dramas.

While the venue for the event is yet to be announced, fans are encouraged to begin preparing their costumes to embody their favourite characters, whether from Naruto, Demon Slayer, or even recent anime-inspired aesthetic films such as K-Pop Demon Hunters. BOPA

BTA hails Malak move to Tunisia

Anastacia Sibanda
GABORONE

Botswana Tennis Association (BTA) vice president has lauded Malak Macheng's move to Tunisia to join the African Regional Training Centre (ARTC) as a milestone achievement for the young athlete.

"This is obviously a great opportunity for Malak," said the BTA vice president, Nonofu Othusitse in an interview.

Othusitse noted that the scholarship was part of a prestigious International Tennis Federation (ITF) initiative.

"We understand that the centre can only take 16 players, eight boys and eight girls, so to make the cut was not easy, as admission was based on both ITF and CAT rankings," he added.

Again, he said the one-year scholarship placed Malak in a high-performance environment designed to bridge the gap between continental talent and international standards. At the Sousse-based facility, Malak will benefit from integrated sport science which entailed all-around access to Sports Medicine services and professional expertise. She will also benefit from Comprehensive Development, which is a curriculum that balanced elite training and high-level competition with off-court personal growth.

She will further have academic rigor, which is a mandatory requirement to maintain an acceptable level of academic performance alongside her athletic commitments.

Malak's mother, Bonnie Macheng, accompanied her daughter for the transition and confirmed in an interview their arrival in Sousse on Tuesday.

After an initial tour of the grounds, she noted that the facilities were user-friendly and well-equipped for elite athletes.

By Wednesday, Malak had already begun her integration, meeting with her new fitness and conditioning coach to outline her training schedule for the year.

The exclusivity of Malak's opportunity has highlighted a gap the BTA is eager to close. Othusitse explained that the limited spots at the ARTC had spurred the association to seek a local solution.

"The BTA is currently in the process of setting up a National Training Centre (NTC) and we have made the necessary applications to the ITF," he said.

He noted that a domestic NTC would allow Botswana to provide a larger number of athletes with the same high-performance training, sports science and medical expertise that Malak was currently accessing in Tunisia. BOPA

Absa Summer Kids Marathon launches nationwide activation

Keetile Bontsibokae
MOLEPOLOLE

The Absa Summer Kids Marathon has grown beyond the track, transforming into a nationwide activation campaign with a mission to inspire healthy lifestyles and strengthen community bonds through sport.

The marathon will kickstart nationwide activation activities on Saturday. "This year's activation tour runs from January 31 to April 04, culminating in the main race on April 18, 2025 in Gaborone Central Business District (CBD), marking the 5th anniversary of Botswana's largest kids' marathon," said Moagi Madisa, the founder of Absa Summer Kids Marathon.

He said the initiative targeted children aged two to 16 years with the view to have fun, instill health and wellness from a young age, unite communities while instilling values of fitness, discipline and social cohesion.

Madisa said the plan of scheduled activities would cover places such as Ghanzi, Maun, Palapye, Francistown, Gaborone and Jwaneng.

Now in its 5th year running, Madisa said the marathon had to date engaged more than 20 000 children through its main race and activation events.

"Last year's flagship run attracted 2 000 participants at the iconic, Three Dikgosi Monument in CBD.

Madisa emphasised the importance of the initiative in tackling modern health challenges.

"In an era where sedentary habits and lifestyle-related health issues are on the rise, the marathon offers a fun and engaging platform for children to move, play and embrace physical activity.

Through age-appropriate races, wellness education and community events, sport becomes a tool for wellbeing rather than competition alone," he said.

Beyond health, he added, the activation tour was designed as a nation-building exercise.

Madisa also said each stop became a community celebration, bringing together children, parents, schools, local authorities, and volunteers.

He explained that sport, in this context, acted as a universal language, breaking barriers, fostering inclusion and nurturing teamwork and respect.

Madisa added that the programme also supported youth development, teaching discipline, resilience, goal-setting and fair play.

For many children, Madisa said the marathon was their first taste of organised sport, sparking interest and opening pathways to future participation and talent development.

As the initiative expands nationwide, he said strategic partnerships were vital to sustaining its impact hence calling on stakeholders across the public and private sectors, including health institutions, schools, corporate and community organisations to join forces.

"By partnering with the Absa Summer Kids Marathon, stakeholders align with a purpose-driven initiative that delivers measurable social impact, healthier children, stronger communities and a more united nation.

Together, we can inspire a generation to live active, responsible and connected lives while building a healthier and more inclusive future," said Madisa. BOPA

Raguin bows out of Australian Junior Open

Anastacia Sibanda
GABORONE

Ntungamili Raguin has bowed out of the last 16 of the Australian Junior Open tournament, but enjoyed an impressive debut at the prestigious event.

He made the country proud as the first Motswana to compete at a junior Grand Slam, delivering strong performances from the qualification rounds through to the main draw and into the last 16. His achievement is commendable, especially considering that just a month ago he was still battling to secure a place in the Australian Open qualifying draw. Throughout the tournament, Raguin demonstrated maturity, composure and the ability to perform under pressure, qualities that set him apart from many of his peers. His run ended after he was eliminated by second seed and world number three, Luis Augusto Queiroz Miguel of Brazil, who won 6-4, 6-3. Queiroz Miguel proved to be a tough opponent, having recently won the J300 tournament in Traralgon, where Ntungamili finished in the semi-finals. Last year in August, the Brazilian also reached the semi-finals of the US Junior Open. Despite the loss, Raguin will take positives from his Australian Junior Open campaign. In the first round, he edged out Bulgaria's

Dimitar Kisimov 7-5, 1-6, 6-4. In the second round, he continued his good form, reaching the last 16 after beating tournament 15th seed Gavin Goode of the United States. He won the first set 6-2, lost the second 3-6, and came back strongly to claim the deciding set 6-4. With the Australian Junior Open now behind him, Raguin will next compete in the J300 tournament in Ecuador on clay courts, followed by preparations for the 2026 French Junior Open. Botswana Tennis Association president Oaitse Thipe said they were pleased with the player's performance. He said that Raguin had been competing against stronger opponents and, with the tournament top seed eliminated, saying Queiroz Miguel was among the favourites to win the title. Thipe added that expectations were that Ntungamili would learn from the experience and apply the lessons in upcoming competitions. "He should hold his head high and now focus on preparing for the French Junior Open. He fought hard and his Australian Open run was good," he said. Meanwhile, Ntungamili is currently ranked 75th, and his performance is expected to improve his ranking, as reaching the round of 16 earned him 180 points. BOPA
